This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR,
BUREAU OF THE CENSUS,
Washington, D. C., February 23, 1910.

SIR:

I have the honor to transmit herewith Part I of a special report on religious bodies, in which are presented a summary of the results and general tables. Part II will present the statistics and general description of the separate denominations.

The statistics presented in this report have been compiled from material collected by the Bureau of the Census under the authority of section 7 of the permanent census act. Limited information of this character was first published in the census report for 1850, and similar information was included in the reports for 1860, 1870, and 1890, so that the present report, representing conditions, as near as may be, at the close of the year 1906, constitutes the fifth collection and publication of these statistics through the agency of the Census.

The essential results of the present inquiry have already been presented in a preliminary bulletin (Census Bulletin 103) in such form and detail as to meet, in most respects, the wants of the general public.

The complete report embraces not only all the material contained in the preliminary bulletin, but covers much additional information, including considerable data not comprehended by any of the former census reports on religious bodies, notably, the statistics of denominational and undenominational Sunday schools; a compilation of the average annual salaries paid to ministers; a statement of the languages used in the conduct of church services; and a sketch of the missionary, educational, and philanthropic work of the various denominations, both at home and abroad.

The statistics for this report were collected partly by correspondence and partly by the employment of special agents. The work was conducted under the supervision of Mr. William C. Hunt, chief statistician for population in this bureau.

Very respectfully,

E. Dana Durand

Director of the Census.

Hon. CHARLES NAGEL,
Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

RELIGIOUS BODIES: 1906.

INTRODUCTION.

SCOPE OF THE INQUIRY.

The law of May 23, 1850, under which the censuses of 1850, 1860, and 1870 were taken, provided for the first time for the collection of social statistics, including among other subjects that of religious organizations. The inquiries to be made under each heading of the schedule were fixed by the census act, and under that of "religion" called for the return for each denomination of the number of churches, church accommodations, and value of church property. Information covering these items was collected at the censuses of 1850 and 1860, but the results of these inquiries showed that the term "Number of churches," as designated by the census law, was ambiguous, and that it was "impossible to feel any assurance, in any particular case, whether church organizations or church edifices had been returned."[1] To avoid the possibility of similar confusion at the census of 1870, therefore, this inquiry was divided in order to insure returns for both church organizations and church edifices.

The marshals and assistant marshals, who were charged with the duty of taking the census in 1850, were provided with detailed instructions concerning the manner in which the returns were to be made under each category of the schedule, and in the absence of any change in the law at the two succeeding censuses it is to be presumed that the same instructions, in effect, governed the work in 1860 and in 1870.[2]

An effort was made at the census of 1880 to secure, mainly by correspondence, very full and complete statistics concerning churches and Sunday schools, but the tabulations were not completed and no results are available for that census.

At the census of 1890 the inquiries concerning religious bodies were as follows: Organizations; church edifices and seating capacity; halls, schoolhouses, etc., and seating capacity; value of church property; and communicants or members. A statement was also requested of the number of ministers in each denomination as a whole, and care was taken to explain the meaning of the terms used, so as to insure results free from ambiguity.

The present inquiry, made in conformity to the provisions of section 7 of the permanent census act,[3] relates to the close of the year 1906. The inquiry covers information secured through the use of the following schedule:

1. Denomination.
2. Division (ecclesiastical).
3. Organization.
4. Location (city, town, or village; county; state).
5. Year in which established.
6. Number of church edifices.
7. Seating capacity.
8. Value of church property.
9. Amount of debt on church.
10. Value of parsonage, if any.
11. Language in which services are conducted.
12. Ministers (number of; salary).
13. Communicants or members (total number; males; females).
14. Sunday schools conducted by church organization (number of schools; number of officers and teachers; number of scholars).

The present inquiry covers, therefore, not only the same ground as that of 1890, but includes several additional items. The inquiries common to both censuses are those numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, and 8, and that part of 13 which relates to the return of the total number of communicants or members. The new inquiries—those numbered 5, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 (in part), and 14—provide information for the first time in a United States census as to the date of establishment of the local church organization, amount of debt on church property, number and value of church parsonages, language in which services are conducted,

[1] Census of 1870, Population and Social Statistics, page 502.

[2] The instructions of 1850 in this respect were as follows:

Columns 25, 26, 27, and 28. Under the heading entitled "Religion," insert a separate account of churches, and other places of worship, belonging to all religious denominations, in the town or county described, including halls and chapels, if statedly used as places of public worship. By number of sittings is meant the number of seats for individuals in such places of worship, or the number of persons they will accommodate.

Under "Value of church property," is to be inserted the present value of each of the churches or chapels, including the lands and estate, real and personal, owned by such religious societies. If a chapel or other place of worship is rented, its value is not to be here included; in such case you must include the name of denomination and the number of members, leaving blank the column numbered 28. As it is possible for a society to have property without a place of worship, the value of such property should be given in column 28. The facts relating to churches may generally be obtained with perfect accuracy from the pastor or clergyman having the same in charge; and, in case of his absence, application should be made to a warden, elder, or trustee.

[3] Act of March 6, 1902, as amended by act of June 30, 1906.

salaries paid to ministers, sex of communicants or members, and the number and membership of Sunday schools conducted by church organizations.

The statistics of religious bodies, based upon these inquiries, refer to the close of the year 1906, as heretofore stated, and are limited to religious organizations in continental United States, no effort having been made to include any portion of the outlying territory.

Although one of these schedules was returned for each church organization represented in the statistics here given, yet in some instances the schedule was not filled in completely. In some cases, as is hereafter explained, the omissions are due simply to failure to answer the questions, and in others to the fact that the questions were not applicable to that particular organization. Because of these omissions a column has been inserted under each topic presented in the general tables for 1906 showing the number of organizations which made a report in regard to that topic. The difference between the number thus presented and the total number of organizations represents, in each case, the number of organizations for which no report was made.

METHODS PURSUED IN COLLECTING THE STATISTICS.

The general plan adopted for the collection of the statistics was by means of correspondence with the individual church organizations, together with such assistance from denominational officials as might be necessary, and as they were able and willing to render.

Sources of information.—In the carrying out of this plan it was necessary first to secure as complete a list as possible, by name and location, of the individual organizations in the several denominations, and for this the denominational officials were chiefly relied upon. The general officers of the various denominations were requested to furnish lists of the ecclesiastical divisions—associations, conferences, dioceses, presbyteries, etc.—composing them, with the names and addresses of their clerks or secretaries; and these divisional officers were in turn requested to furnish lists of organizations and ministers in their respective divisions.

For statistical purposes the natural divisions were found to be: For Baptist bodies the association; for Methodist bodies the district; for Presbyterian bodies the presbytery; for the Congregationalist churches the state conference (using the term recommended by the National Council); and in the Roman Catholic and Protestant Episcopal churches the diocese. Accordingly the clerk of the Baptist association, the presiding elder or district superintendent of the Methodist district, the stated clerk of the presbytery, the statistical secretary of the Congregational state conference, and the secretary of the Roman Catholic or Protestant Episcopal diocese, were applied to for the needed information.

This request for the assistance of the general and divisional officers of the various denominations met in most instances with a hearty response, and by this means a list of organizations, by ecclesiastical divisions, was obtained for each of the denominations having such divisions. In the case of those bodies which have no ecclesiastical divisions, lists of organizations were furnished by their general officers.

Plan of enumeration.—With these lists as a basis, a copy of the schedule already referred to, with the necessary instructions and a return franked envelope, was addressed to the pastor or clerk of each church organization. The original plan was to send these direct to the church organizations, and when filled out and properly signed have them sent to the divisional officer, to be in turn certified by him and forwarded to the Bureau of the Census. The purpose of this was to give the divisional officer an opportunity to see whether any of the churches under his jurisdiction had failed to report, and also whether the returns as made were substantially correct. It appeared, however, that according to the postal law the pastor or clerk of the church was not permitted to send the schedule under the frank of the Bureau to the divisional officer, since the latter was not an employee of the Government, and according to another law, could not be commissioned without compensation. Accordingly the plan was adopted of inclosing these addressed envelopes to the divisional officer, in the first instance, with the request that he make any needed correction in the addresses, see that the proper number of cards were inclosed in each envelope, namely, one for each church served by the pastor, and forward them to the church organizations. Also, in order to make sure that no churches were omitted, a number of blank envelopes, with schedules and instructions, were sent to him, to be forwarded to such organizations as might not have been included in the list. The schedules, when filled out and properly signed by the pastor or clerk, were then to be inclosed in the return franked envelope and sent direct to the Bureau of the Census.

In cases where the divisional officer declined to cooperate in this way, the schedules were sent to the individual organizations direct. The result was that the returns for about two-thirds of the entire number of organizations were secured through this method of direct correspondence with the individual organizations.

In the case of a considerable number of denominations, however, where for various reasons the work was attended with special difficulties, the statistics were collected in whole or in part through the general or statistical secretaries, or other prominent representatives, who were commissioned as special agents for the purpose, and who were willing for a nominal sum to cooperate with the Bureau of the Census in this way. Among the denominations for which the work was done, partly by direct correspondence and then placed in the hands of special agents for completion, are two branches of the Baptists—the Southern Baptist Convention and the National Baptist Convention (Colored)—the Primitive Baptists, and the Disciples of Christ. Among those for which the statistics were collected entirely under the supervision of their own representatives are the Roman Catholic Church, the Churches of Christ (Disciples), and the Jewish congregations. There were also a number of comparatively small bodies, many of them having but few organizations each, which could better be reached through their own representatives than through direct correspondence, because they either had no complete ecclesiastical system, or were not accustomed to furnishing statistics of their churches, or were opposed to doing so through conscientious scruples.

The returns for the National Baptist Convention (Colored) were finally completed by a personal canvass by agents sent out from the Bureau, as were also those for the three principal colored Methodist bodies, namely, the African Methodist Episcopal Church, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.

Means of verification.—All the items of information contained in the schedules for the various denominations were transferred to sheets, by individual organizations and ecclesiastical divisions, and by states, counties, and cities of 25,000 inhabitants or more, in this way bringing together, in the form most convenient for scrutiny and subsequent tabulation, all the information for each denomination.

For the purpose of verification, the returns for each individual church organization and for each ecclesiastical division and denomination were carefully compared with the yearbooks and minutes of the various bodies, and with all other available sources of information, and supplemental information was obtained by special correspondence, wherever this was found necessary.

In the case of some denominations it will be found that the number of organizations as given in this report is less than that shown by the yearbooks for 1906. In many instances this may be accounted for by the fact that the yearbooks include the names of churches which are either extinct or practically so, and for which no report could be obtained, and in other cases by the fact that the figures as given in the yearbooks include mere preaching places or unorganized missions, which, as will later appear, could not well be included in this report.

The employment of these different means of collecting and verifying the statistics, as circumstances required, has resulted in a very thorough and complete presentation.

Difficulties encountered.—The chief difficulty encountered in the prosecution of the work was that of securing prompt returns from the individual church organizations. A little more than one-half of the entire number sent in their reports with reasonable promptness, and had all done the same, the census might have been completed at a much earlier date, but many responded only after long delay and after repeated reminders had been sent to them. In many instances it was necessary to call upon the divisional officers for special assistance in securing returns for the delinquent churches, this assistance being rendered by them gratuitously.

Another difficulty was that of securing the complete and proper filling of the schedule by the pastor or clerk of the individual church organization. In many cases it could not be determined from the schedule to what ecclesiastical division or even to what denomination the church for which it was returned belonged, or in what county it was located. In other respects also the schedules as first returned were frequently imperfectly filled out. To supply the information lacking required a great amount of extra correspondence, and was the occasion of delaying greatly the completion of the work.

SPECIAL DATA, AND HOW OBTAINED.

Besides the statistics based on the returns from the individual church organizations, special provision was made for securing (1) an authoritative statement, for each denomination as a whole, as to its history, doctrine, polity, and work, the latter comprehending its activities in the home and foreign missionary fields and in educational, philanthropic, institutional, and other lines of work; (2) a statement covering the undenominational and union Sunday schools of the country, as a supplement to the statistics of Sunday schools connected with the local church organizations in the several denominations; and (3) substantially complete statistics of the independent, unassociated, or union churches scattered over the country, in which there has been a very considerable development in recent years.

History, doctrine, polity, and work of denominations.—The statements under this head follow in general the plan of similar statements in the report for 1890, except that they are more comprehensive and include under the title of work the missionary, educational, and philanthropic activities of the denominations both in the United States and in foreign lands.

For the preparation of them application was made to prominent men, usually officials, in the different bodies, and a general outline was furnished to each, covering the specific points which it was desired to set forth. This outline included different points under each head as follows: (1) History: The origin, development, and present status of the denomination. (2) Doctrine: General classification, whether Calvinistic, Arminian, Lutheran, Liberal, or other, together with the creeds or confessions recognized as furnishing the basis of church membership and of ordination to the ministry. (3) Polity: General classification, whether Congregational, Episcopal, Methodist, Presbyterian, etc., together with specific forms of organization, local and general. (4) Work: Home missionary, foreign missionary, educational, institutional, and general.

The statements received varied greatly. In some the history was given in full; in others the barest summary was furnished. The doctrinal statements were, with few exceptions, quite complete, while those on polity varied in their extent almost as much as those on history. The description of work done was in general quite full, though not infrequently detailed figures were not provided. In order to secure greater harmony and better proportion in all these parts, considerable correspondence was carried on both with those who furnished the original material and with others who were able to provide information on specific points. In every case also the yearbooks and histories of the denominations, as well as books of general reference, were consulted.

The original intention was to publish the statements either over the names of the writers or to give them credit. It appeared, however, that in many cases this was impracticable, and the editorial form was adopted for all. This naturally involved some changes in form of statement, and some rearrangement of material, in order to secure general uniformity of presentation. Whenever it seemed best for the sake of clearness or brevity to retain phrases which would be appropriate only from the specific standpoint of the denomination, quotation marks have been used. The final form has been submitted either to the author or, in a few instances where that was impracticable, to some one in the denomination competent to pass upon it.

In the historical sections the interrelations of the different bodies and the part they have had in the general life of the country have been kept in mind as well as their internal development. Wherever differing or opposing views had to be taken into consideration, the statement has been confined to the simple historical facts, and where interpretation was essential it has been made clear that it was from the standpoint of the interested body. It is indicative of the general character of the material furnished, that the instances of sharp divergence in this particular have been very few.

In the sections on doctrine and polity the specific points emphasized by each denomination are set forth as briefly as possible, reference being made in several cases to fuller statements in connection with other bodies. This is especially true of such families as the Methodist and Presbyterian, where the statement for the leading member of the family suffices in most respects for all. The various sections are generally set off by special headings, but in some of the smaller bodies the doctrine and polity are included under the head of history.

The section on work of the denominations includes both textual statement and a tabular presentation of certain items common to all, or the great number, of the denominations. In the preparation of this section certain difficulties, arising partly from diverse forms of organization, partly from the use of diverse methods and terms, but chiefly from incomplete or general rather than specific reports, prevented that completeness and accuracy which is essential to any thoroughly scientific census presentation.

In this connection it may be stated that a number of societies or associations directly connected with Christian work and similar to many of the denominational societies are not represented either in the textual statements or the tables. Among these are the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and kindred organizations; the American Bible Society; and the American Tract Society. These are omitted not from any failure to recognize the character of their work, but because under the law governing this report it is limited to religious bodies, and those organizations not directly connected with some denomination are thus excluded.

It should be again emphasized that the presentation, whether in the statements or in the tables, does not include all the work done by the individual organizations of the various religious bodies. It includes only such as has been reported by the various general societies or organizations of the denominations. A vast amount of similar work is done on independent lines. Making, however, as stated in connection with the tables, due allowance for the conditions, the general presentation, it is believed, is reasonably accurate, and is a fairly clear survey of the subject.

Undenominational Sunday schools.—In addition to the Sunday schools conducted by individual church organizations in the various denominations, there are a large number of undenominational schools, which obviously could not be reached by means of the general schedule. As the statistics of these schools were necessary to an adequate presentation of the Sunday school work in the United States, provision was made for securing them through the International Sunday School Association, of which Marion Lawrance, of Chicago, Ill., is general secretary. The method employed by Mr. Lawrance was to obtain from the state secretary of the association in each state and territory a list of the county secretaries, and from these in turn to obtain a list, by name and location, of the undenominational Sunday schools in their respective counties, with the names and addresses of their superintendents, and the number of officers and teachers and the number of scholars in each school. In counties where the association had no secretaries the information was obtained from the county superintendents of public schools. Valuable assistance was also rendered to the association by lists of schools provided by the missionaries of the American Sunday School Union. The work was done in a thorough manner, and it is believed that the figures presented comprise substantially complete statistics of the undenominational Sunday schools of the country.

Independent churches.—With the request sent to the divisional officers of the various denominations for lists of their own churches, a form was inclosed on which they were requested to furnish also the name and location of any independent or unassociated churches known to them, within the bounds of their several jurisdictions. A similar form was inclosed with the schedules sent to the pastors of the denominational churches, and they were asked to give the name and location of any churches in their vicinity which were not identified with any denomination. In addition, a careful search was made in the directories of all the principal cities for the names of independent churches. A schedule was then sent to the pastor or clerk of each of the churches on the list so obtained, and he was requested, in filling out the schedule, to indicate whether the church was, as reported, an independent or unassociated church, and with what denomination, if any, it was affiliated. Returns for most of the organizations which have been classified under the general head of "Independent churches" were received in answer to these inquiries. Among them there are a considerable number which bear denominational names, but which appear to have no denominational connection. Most of these, after every effort had been made to classify them, were placed with the Independent churches. In some cases, however, it appeared that enough denominational affiliation existed to identify them practically with some ecclesiastical division, and in these cases they were added to the respective denominations.

PLAN OF REPORT.

The report on religious bodies comprises three general sections: The first section consists of a summary of the detailed statistics derived from the returns of the local church organizations, together with such explanations as are necessary to a proper understanding of the figures presented for the several denominations, and, in addition thereto, summary statements, by denominations only, covering the average annual salaries paid to ministers, the date of establishment of church organizations, and the languages used in the conduct of church services; the second section consists of a series of fifteen general tables giving the statistics for 1906 in detail for continental United States, for each state and territory, in part for counties and principal cities, and to a certain extent in comparison with similar statistics derived from previous census reports; these two sections form Part I of the report. The third section, forming Part II of the report, is devoted to a separate presentation for each denomination of the statistics for 1906, by states and territories and by ecclesiastical divisions, in conjunction with an authoritative statement of the history, doctrine, polity, and work of the denomination as a whole.

CLASSIFICATION OF DENOMINATIONS AT FORMER CENSUS PERIODS.

The first statistics of religious bodies, published in the report of the census of 1850, were presented for the principal or leading denominations, arranged simply in their alphabetical order. These were 18 in number and designated as follows: Baptist, Christian, Congregational, Dutch Reformed, Episcopal, Friends, German Reformed, Jews, Lutheran, Mennonite, Methodist, Moravian, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, Swedenborgian, Tunker, Unitarian, and Universalist. The Congregational churches of Pennsylvania were grouped under the title "Orthodox Congregational," but could have been very properly included under the general denominational head. No attempt was made to distinguish between the various branches of the larger denominations—for example, the Baptists, Methodists, or Presbyterians—and all churches not easily included under one of the foregoing 18 titles were either grouped under the heads of "Free" or "Union" or combined under that of "Minor Sects." The last-named group, especially, included a number of churches in certain states which belonged to some of the 18 denominations specified, although in other states they were listed separately; subsequently, at the period of the census of 1870, they were transferred to their proper places and so presented in a summary given in the report for 1870. This summary was reprinted in the report for 1890 and is also included in the present report,[1] but the statistics for each denomination presented in the summary, while agreeing in total with those published in the original report for 1850 do not correspond in detail.

A classification by "family" groups first appeared in the report for 1860, but only two families were so registered—Baptists and Presbyterians; the former included Baptists and Freewill, Mennonite, Seventh-day, Tunker, and Winebrennerian Baptists, while the latter included Presbyterians and Cumberland, Reformed, and United Presbyterians. The Orthodox Congregationalists of Pennsylvania, separately listed in 1850, were grouped under their general denominational head, the Mennonites and Tunkers were included in the Baptist family, as above stated, and the Adventists, Shakers, and Spiritualists appeared as new denominations.

The classification in the report for 1870 was not as detailed as in that for 1860. All but the Regular Baptists were included under the head of "Other" Baptists, and a similar rule was followed with respect to the Presbyterians. Three denominations—the Evangelical Association, Mormons, and United Brethren in Christ—appeared for the first time, but a large number of churches were classed under the heads of "Miscellaneous," "Unknown (local missions)," and "Unknown (union)."

The presentation of denominations in the report for 1890 was very complete, both as to families and as to separate denominations. The total number of denominations covered by the report was 145, including the three branches of Regular Baptists as separate and distinct denominations and counting the independent Lutheran congregations and the independent miscellaneous congregations as the equivalent of two denominations. Of the 145 denominations so listed in 1890, 120 were grouped in 18 families and 25 were listed separately.

NAMES AND CLASSIFICATION OF DENOMINATIONS IN 1906.

The statistics of religious bodies for 1906 embrace a total of 186 denominations in the United States, if the "Independent churches" be classed as one denomination. Of these 186 denominations, 154 are grouped in 27 families, and 32 are classed as unrelated or separate denominations. Since 1890 the number of denominations has increased by 41 and the number of denominational families by 9. The following summary indicates, in general, the movement in religious denominations between the two censuses:

Denominations reported in 1890		145
Denominations which have ceased to exist	12
Denominations consolidated with other denominations	4
Denominations which have disappeared through change in classification	4
Total denominations which have disappeared		20
Denominations reported in both 1890 and 1906		125
Denominations added by division of denominations	13
Other new denominations	48
Total new denominations		61
Denominations reported in 1906		186

So far as the names and classification of the religious bodies in existence in 1890 are concerned, the present report agrees, in the main, with that of 1890. A few changes have been made in order to meet criticisms of the latter report. As the work of collecting the statistics for the several denominations progressed, it was found that there was some dissatisfaction with the terminology and classification previously used. It was evident, however, that no list of denominations, grouped as far as possible by denominational families, could be devised which would be entirely consistent and practical, and at the same time scientific, owing partly to the great diversity among religious bodies, partly to their predilections, and partly to the popular use of certain names which would render the adoption of the corporate names confusing or even misleading. As far as practicable, the predilections of each denomination have been consulted, and, the list of denominations finally adopted,[1] after a careful review of existing conditions and after extended conference with a number of persons actively identified with the religious work of the country, is deemed, on the whole, to meet the peculiar difficulties of the case. In addition to the changes made to meet the criticisms referred to, there are changes due to altered conditions. Separate denominations in the families are in general arranged in the order of the date of organization, though occasionally, for specific reasons, that has been modified.

The changes in the list of denominations from that given in the report for 1890 are indicated in detail under four heads: (1) Changes in the names of denominations; (2) changes in the names of denominational families; (3) disappearance of denominations and denominational families; and (4) new denominations and denominational families.

Changes in the names of denominations.—The report for 1890, in the case of some of the denominations, failed to use the corporate name, but substituted a short and more popular designation. The present report, with few exceptions, has adopted the corporate name. The only changes requiring notice are indicated in the following tabular statement giving the names by which the bodies in question have been known at the two periods:

1906	1890
Associate Synod of North America (Associate Presbyterian Church).	Associate Church of North America.
Christian Union	Churches of Christ in Christian Union, Independent.
Churches of God in North America, General Eldership of the.	Church of God (Winebrennerian).
Duck River and Kindred Associations of Baptists (Baptist Church of Christ).	Baptist Church of Christ.
Free Baptists	Freewill Baptists.
Freewill Baptists	Original Freewill Baptists.
National Baptist Convention (Colored)	Regular Baptists (Colored).
Northern Baptist Convention	Regular Baptists (North).
Presbyterian Church in the United States.	Presbyterian Church in the United States (Southern).
Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.	Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (Northern).
Reformed Zion Union Apostolic Church (Colored Methodist).	Zion Union Apostolic.
Southern Baptist Convention	Regular Baptists (South).
Temple Society in the United States (Friends of the Temple).	Friends of the Temple.
United Society of Believers (Shakers)	Society of Shakers.

Changes in the names of denominational families.—In the report for 1890, the denominational families were generally designated by the names usually given to the adherents of the constituent denominations, as Adventists, Baptists, etc. This procedure has been criticised, and the terms "bodies" and "churches," with the appropriate adjective prefixed, have been suggested. Since the term "churches" is also used in reference to local churches, the term "bodies" has been adopted. In a few cases where they seemed to be peculiarly appropriate, however, the terms "churches" and "societies" have been used, and in a few cases, in order to avoid an awkward or undesirable phrase, the customary term has been retained.

Disappearance of denominations and denominational families.—The following 12 denominations, represented in the report for 1890, have been omitted from that for 1906, since no information indicating their denominational existence in 1906 has been found, and in the case of most of them a definite statement was received that they had been dissolved:

Adonai Shomo (Communistic).
Christian Missionary Association.
Church Triumphant or Koreshan Ecclesia (Communistic).
Church Triumphant (Schweinfurth).
Congregational Methodist (Colored).
Evangelist Missionary Church (Methodist).
Harmony Society (Communistic).
Independent Methodists.
New Icaria Society (Communistic).
Old Catholic Church.
Society of Altruists (Communistic).
Society of Separatists (Communistic).

In the report for 1890, 5 denominations were represented which have since been consolidated with other denominations. They are given in the following tabular statement, together with the denominations with which they have been respectively consolidated:

DENOMINATION CONSOLIDATED WITH ANOTHER DENOMINATION.	DENOMINATION WITH WHICH CONSOLIDATED.
Apostolic Mennonite Church	General Conference of Mennonites of North America.
Christian Church (South)	Christians (Christian Connection).
Danish Church Association (Lutheran)	United Danish Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.
German Augsburg Synod (Lutheran)	Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Michigan and Other States, and other Lutheran bodies.
Lutheran Independent congregations	Various Lutheran bodies and (in part) Independent churches.

The Danish Church Association was combined with the Danish Evangelical Lutheran Church in North America, organized since the report for 1890, to form the United Danish Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, and on this account the consolidations given in the foregoing statement have reduced the number of denominations by only 4 as compared with 1890.

In addition, the number of denominations has been reduced by 4 through change in classification. In the report for 1890, the 3 Baptist bodies designated, respectively, Regular Baptists (North), Regular Baptists (South), and Regular Baptists (Colored) were classed as 3 separate denominations. This classification has occasioned considerable criticism, since it was maintained that they are not 3 denominations, but 1 as far as doctrine, polity, and usages are concerned, the distinction being purely for administrative purposes. In the present report they are classed as a single denomination, but the statistics are presented separately for each branch. The number of Jewish denominations has been reduced from 2 to 1, because the Jewish authorities who furnished the information for the present report did not accept the separation made in 1890 between Orthodox and Reformed Jews. The Greek Catholic Church (Uniat), classed as a separate denomination in 1890, is more properly a part of the Roman Catholic Church, and has been so classed in the present report.

Four denominational families which appeared in the report for 1890 do not appear in that for 1906. They are given in the following tabular statement, together with the reasons for their omission:

DENOMINATIONAL FAMILY.	REASON FOR OMISSION.
Catholic bodies Protestant Episcopal bodies	Predilection of some of the constituent denominations to be considered unrelated bodies.
Christians (Christian Connection)	Union of the constituent denominations.
Jewish congregations	Classification of the constituent denominations as one denomination.

New denominations and denominational families.—The following tabular statement gives the names of 17 denominations which have been added by division of denominations, as well as the names of the bodies from which they respectively branched off. The net gain in this manner, however, is only 13, since in 4 cases the denominations from which they respectively branched off were entirely reorganized into two or more new bodies.

DENOMINATION ADDED BY DIVISION OF A DENOMINATION.	DENOMINATION WITH WHICH FORMERLY INCLUDED.
American Salvation Army	Salvation Army.
Churches of Christ	Disciples of Christ.
Church of God (Adventist), Unattached Congregations.	Church of God (Seventh-day Adventist).
Colored Primitive Baptists in America	Primitive Baptists.
General Church of the New Jerusalem	Church of the New Jerusalem (Swedenborgian).
General Convention of the New Jerusalem in the United States of America.	Church of the New Jerusalem (Swedenborgian).
German Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Texas.	General Council of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in North America.
German Evangelical Protestant Ministers' Association.	German Evangelical Protestant Church.
German Evangelical Protestant Ministers' Conference.	German Evangelical Protestant Church.
Krimmer Brueder-Gemeinde	Bundes Conferenz der Mennoniten Brueder-Gemeinde.
Polish National Church of America	Roman Catholic Church.
Schellenberger Brueder-Gemeinde	Bundes Conferenz der Mennoniten Brueder-Gemeinde.
Theosophical Society, American Section.	Theosophical Society.
Theosophical Society in America	Theosophical Society.
Theosophical Society, New York	Theosophical Society.
Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society.	Theosophical Society.
United Evangelical Church	Evangelical Association.

These former denominations which have been completely reorganized are the Church of the New Jerusalem (Swedenborgian), German Evangelical Protestant Church, Bundes Conferenz der Mennoniten Brueder-Gemeinde, and the Theosophical Society.

In the following list 48 denominations are named which have been added otherwise than by division of denominations. Of these, 11 are the result of immigration; 29 are new denominations not the result of division of denominations existing in 1890; 7 are bodies in existence in 1890, but not included in the report for that year; and 1 is a denomination erroneously included with another body, in the report for 1890.

Denominations added through immigration:
- Eastern Orthodox Churches:
  - Servian Orthodox Church.
  - Syrian Orthodox Church.
- Evangelical Union of Bohemian and Moravian Brethren in North America.

Denominations in existence in 1890, but not included in the report for that year:
- Christian Israelite Church.
- Freewill Baptists (Bullockites).
- Lutheran bodies:
  - Apostolic Lutheran Church (Finnish).
  - Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Eielsen's Synod.
  - Evangelical Lutheran Jehovah Conference.
- Nebraska and Minnesota Conference of Mennonites.
- Reformed Methodist Union Episcopal Church (Colored).

Denomination erroneously included, in 1890, in the General Council of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America:
- Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Iowa and Other States.

Nine new denominational families appear in the report for 1906 through division of bodies existing in 1890 or through addition to them from abroad. They are given in the first of the following tables, together with the occasion of their formation.

Four new denominational families have originated otherwise than by division of bodies existing in 1890 or addition to them from abroad. They are given in the second of the following tables, together with the occasion of their formation:

DENOMINATIONAL FAMILY.	OCCASION OF FORMATION.
Buddhists	Addition of Japanese Buddhists, who have settled in the United States chiefly since 1890.
Catholic Apostolic Churches	Addition of the New Apostolic Church through immigration of its adherents from Germany.
Churches of the New Jerusalem	Division of the Church of the New Jerusalem (Swedenborgian) into two bodies.
Disciples or Christians	Division of the Disciples of Christ into two bodies.
Evangelical bodies	Division of the Evangelical Association into two bodies.
German Evangelical Protestant bodies.	Division of the German Evangelical Protestant Church into two bodies.
Moravian bodies	Organization, by immigrants from Europe, of a new denomination entitled Evangelical Union of Bohemian and Moravian Brethren of North America.
Salvationists	Withdrawal of the American Salvation Army from the Salvation Army.
Theosophical societies	Organization of four separate societies by members of the Theosophical Society.
Churches of the Living God (Colored).	Organization of a new denomination since 1890, and its subsequent division into three bodies.
Eastern Orthodox Churches	Formed of the Russian and the Greek Orthodox Churches, classed with Catholic bodies in the report for 1890, and of the Servian and the Syrian Orthodox Churches, organized in the United States since 1890.
Evangelistic associations	Formed of local churches, organized more or less closely for the purpose of carrying on evangelistic work.
Swedish Evangelical bodies	Formed of two bodies organized by Swedish immigrants since 1890.

SUMMARY

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

SUMMARY OF STATISTICS FOR CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES.

The first broad division of this report relates to continental United States, and consists of a classification according to religious denominations of the material collected relative to each of the following topics: Organizations, communicants or members, places of worship, value of church property, debt on church property, and value of parsonages. These statistics, which are included in summarized form in the ensuing text, are given in detail in Tables 1 and 8 (pages 148 and 514).

For purposes of textual consideration the distinctively Protestant bodies—those which in history and general character are identified more or less closely with the Protestant Reformation or its subsequent development—are grouped under one head. Twenty-two bodies are not included in this group. They comprise those bodies which are distinctively non-Protestant, those which differ in some important characteristics from the Protestant bodies, and those into whose organization the question of Protestantism can scarcely be said to enter. These 22 bodies are grouped as follows:

(1) The Roman Catholic Church.

(2) The Jewish congregations.

(3) The Latter-day Saints, consisting of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

(4) The Eastern Orthodox Churches, consisting of the Russian Orthodox Church, the Servian Orthodox Church, the Syrian Orthodox Church, and the Greek Orthodox Church.

(5) All other bodies—consisting of the Armenian Church; the Bahais; the Buddhists, who comprise the worshipers in Chinese and Japanese Temples; the Communistic societies, which comprise the United Society of Believers (Shakers) and the Amana Society; the Polish National Church of America; the Society for Ethical Culture; the Spiritualists; the Theosophical societies, which comprise the Theosophical Society in America, the Theosophical Society, New York, the Theosophical Society, American Section, and the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society; and the Vedanta Society.

RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS.

The statistical unit in the presentation of religious bodies is the organization. The term is used in this report in the same sense as in that for 1890; it is a comprehensive designation for what is variously called a church, a congregation, a society, or a meeting, and embraces not only a church proper, but also each mission, station, or chapel, when separately organized. In the great majority of bodies the organization is distinctively a gathering for religious service. In one instance, the Chinese Temples, it represents the building, containing one or more shrines at which Chinese Buddhists worship, and in a number of instances, as in the case of the Bahais, the Society for Ethical Culture, and the Theosophical societies, it represents a gathering for conference on ethical, philosophical, or social subjects, as well as religious topics.

The total number of organizations covered by the present investigation is 212,230, as reported by 186 denominations. For purposes of presentation, as already explained, 154 of these bodies are arranged under 27 family heads, while 32 bodies are not so grouped but are listed separately in alphabetical order. The distribution of religious organizations by principal families and separate denominations in 1906 (those reporting 50,000 or more communicants or members), in comparison with similar figures for 1890, is given in the table on page 22.

Of the 212,230 organizations in 1906, shown by the following table, 195,618, or 92.2 per cent, are reported by the 164 Protestant bodies; 12,482, or 5.9 per cent, by the Roman Catholic Church; and 4,130, or about 2 per cent, by the remaining bodies, including Jewish congregations, Latter-day Saints, Eastern Orthodox Churches, and 14 minor bodies. The report for 1890 showed for continental United States a total of 165,151 organizations, of which 153,054, or 92.7 per cent, were reported by Protestant bodies; 10,239, or 6.2 per cent, by the Roman Catholic Church; and 1,858, or a little more than 1 per cent, by all the remaining bodies. According to these figures, between 1890 and 1906 the total number of religious organizations in the United States increased 47,079, or 28.5 per cent. For Protestant bodies the increase was 42,564, or 27.8 per cent; for the Roman Catholic Church 2,243, or 21.9 per cent; for Jewish congregations 1,236, or 231.9 per cent; and for Latter-day Saints, 328, or 38.3 per cent. The Eastern Orthodox Churches have practically come into existence since 1890, and this is also true with respect to several of the smaller denominations which are included under "All other bodies."

The Methodist bodies rank first in number of organizations, in 1906, reporting 64,701, or 30.5 per cent of the entire number in the United States. The Baptist bodies rank second, with 54,880 organizations, or 25.9 per cent of the whole number. As compared with 1890, the Methodist bodies show an increase in the number of organizations of 13,212,[1] or 25.7 per cent, and the Baptist bodies an increase of 11,971, or 27.9 per cent. These two families embrace considerably more than one-half (56.4 per cent) of the whole number of organizations, and also show more than one-half of the entire increase between 1890 and 1906, or 25,183 out of a total increase for all bodies of 47,079.

Six other Protestant families, or denominations, comprise from 2 to more than 7 per cent of all the organizations in 1906, namely, Presbyterian bodies with 15,506 organizations, or 7.3 per cent of the total number; Lutheran bodies with 12,703, or 6 per cent; Disciples or Christians with 10,942, or 5.2 per cent; Protestant Episcopal Church with 6,845, or 3.2 per cent; Congregationalists with 5,713, or 2.7 per cent; and United Brethren bodies with 4,304, or 2 per cent. These 6, together with the Methodist and Baptist families, comprise 71 bodies, which represent substantially nine-tenths of the Protestant organizations, and 82.8 per cent of all the religious organizations in the United States.

The differences in the per cent distribution of organizations in 1906 as compared with 1890 are in general small and indicate that the relative importance of the several families and denominations has not changed essentially since the former report, so far as organizations are concerned.

Of the larger Protestant bodies only 3 show a decline in the number of organizations. These are the Christians (Christian Connection), which had 1,379 organizations in 1906 as against 1,424 in 1890, a loss of 45, or 3.2 per cent; United Brethren bodies, which had 4,304 organizations in 1906 as against 4,526 in 1890, a loss of 222, or 4.9 per cent; and the Universalists, which had 846 organizations in 1906 as against [1] Some of this increase is only apparent; see explanatory statement on page 23 concerning the returns for the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

956 in 1890, a loss of 110, or 11.5 per cent. It should be noted, however, that the loss in the United Brethren bodies (see Table 8, page 514) is confined entirely to one body, Church of the United Brethren in Christ (Old Constitution), the other body having substantially the same number of organizations in 1906 as in 1890.

The Jewish congregations, with 1,769 organizations in 1906 as compared with 533 in 1890, show a gain of 1,236 organizations, or 231.9 per cent. For the Latter-day Saints, comprising 2 bodies, the number of organizations has risen from 856 in 1890 to 1,184 in 1906, representing a gain of 328, or 38.3 per cent. The Eastern Orthodox Churches, which had only 2 organizations in 1890—Greek Orthodox and Russian Orthodox, 1 each—are now represented by 4 bodies comprising 411 organizations, of which 334 are Greek Orthodox churches.

The more detailed presentation in Table 8 (page 514) throws considerable light on the preceding statements for the principal families and denominations.

It shows, for example, that among the Adventist bodies the gain in organizations is contributed wholly by the Seventh-day branch, for which 1,889 organizations were reported in 1906 as against 995 in 1890. Each of the other 6 branches shows a slight loss in number of organizations.

The Baptist bodies show a gain between 1890 and 1906 of 11,971 organizations, but most of this gain is to be credited to 2 branches of the Baptist denomination, namely, the Southern Baptist Convention, with an increase of 4,866 organizations, and the National Baptist Convention (Colored), with an increase of 6,001. The 2 bodies of Primitive Baptists show an increase of 612 organizations; the Freewill Baptists, an increase of 441; and the Northern Baptist Convention, an increase of 370. Many of the remaining branches, however, show a loss, especially the Free Baptists, whose organizations decreased in number from 1,586 in 1890 to 1,346 in 1906, and the Two-Seed-in-the-Spirit Predestinarian Baptists, whose organizations decreased from 473 in 1890 to 55 in 1906. Evidently some readjustment of organizations has taken place, because certain churches reported in 1890 as affiliated with one body are now reported as connected with another.

The Church of Christ, Scientist, as indicated by the foregoing table, has experienced a rapid growth. The number of organizations increased from 221 in 1890 to 638 in 1906—a gain of 417, or 188.7 per cent.

The growth in the number of "Independent churches," has also been phenomenal. In 1890 the number of independent congregations reported was 155. The number given for 1906 is 1,079, indicating a gain of 924, or 596.1 per cent. There are included under this title in 1906 four classes of churches: (1) Churches which call themselves absolutely independent, owning no ecclesiastical association or affiliation; (2) churches using a denominational name but declining any ecclesiastical connection with a denominational body; (3) union churches, representing combinations of two or more denominations, but not ecclesiastically identified with any; (4) churches which, while generally agreeing in doctrine and frequently loosely associated so far as their ministers are concerned, yet have no general organization. A tendency is already manifest within them for more or less organization and consolidation, and whether their distinctive independency will continue is thus a matter of doubt.

The Lutheran bodies have increased in number of organizations from 8,595 to 12,703, a gain of 4,108, or 47.8 per cent. Each of the principal bodies shows a considerable gain in number of organizations. The largest numerical increase in any single body is that for the Evangelical Lutheran Synodical Conference of America, whose organizations rose in number from 1,934 in 1890 to 3,301 in 1906, a gain of 1,367, or 70.7 per cent.

Each of the Methodist bodies in existence in 1906 shows a gain in number of organizations since 1890. The principal gains, out of a total increase of 13,212 organizations for all Methodist bodies, were 4,082, or 15.8 per cent, for the Methodist Episcopal Church; and 2,814, or 18.7 per cent, for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The gain of 4,166, or 167.9 per cent, for the African Methodist Episcopal Church is largely apparent, because for that body circuits containing 2, 3, and 4 churches were counted as single organizations in 1890, whereas in 1906 each of these churches was counted separately.

The increase of 2,035 organizations among the Presbyterian bodies was mainly contributed by two denominations—the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, which reported an increase of 1,223 organizations, and the Presbyterian Church in the United States, which reported an increase of 713. The Cumberland Presbyterian Church, taken, as near as may be, as it existed at the close of the ecclesiastical year in March, 1906, shows a gain since 1890 of only 59 organizations, or 2.1 per cent, while all but 3 of the 9 remaining Presbyterian bodies show a decrease.

At the censuses of 1850, 1860, and 1870 inquiry was made concerning churches, as already explained. The results of the inquiries for these three censuses, although the completeness of the returns is somewhat doubtful, are given by denominations in Table 15 (page 565), from which it appears that the number of "churches" reported was 38,061 in 1850 and 54,009 in 1860; and further, that at the census of 1870, under the division of the inquiries, the number of church organizations reported was 72,459 and the number of church edifices, 63,082. On the face of the returns, therefore, the number of churches increased 15,948, or 41.9 per cent, from 1850 to 1860. A comparison of the number of churches in 1860 with the number of church organizations in 1870 shows an increase of 18,450, or 34.2 per cent. These percentages may be regarded as indicating roughly the probable growth of religious bodies during the two decades in question. For the twenty years from 1870 to 1890, the basis of comparison is positive, and the figures show that the number of church organizations more than doubled, increasing from 72,459 in 1870 to 165,151 in 1890, a gain of 92,692, or 127.9 per cent, but part of this increase is due to the fact that the canvass was more thorough in 1890 than in 1870. As previously stated, the increase from 1890 to 1906 is 47,079, or 28.5 per cent.

COMMUNICANTS OR MEMBERS.

The term "communicants or members" includes, as in the report for 1890, all persons who are entitled or privileged to participate in the ordinance of communion, or the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, in denominations which observe it, and all members in other denominations.

Comparison between the different denominations in regard to their membership, to be valuable, must take into consideration the conditions of membership, particularly with respect to the age limits involved.

In all Protestant bodies, and in many of the other bodies, especially those on the society basis, membership implies definite action both by the applicant and by the official representatives of the denomination. It is therefore practically adult membership, although it may include those as young as 12 or 15 years.

In the Armenian, Eastern Orthodox, Polish National, and Roman Catholic churches all baptized persons, including infants, are regarded and returned as members. In the Armenian and Eastern Orthodox churches all are communicants, but the number of adult males without families is so large that the figures may be taken as fairly comparable with those of other bodies. In the Roman Catholic Church, as just stated, a report was made including as members all baptized persons, but, in accordance with the course pursued in 1890, 15 per cent of this number was deducted to cover those under 9 years of age, as this is the age at which the first communion is usually taken. The conditions in the Polish National Church are similar to those in the Roman Catholic Church, but no deduction has been made because of the small number involved.

In the Jewish congregations only heads of families, in some instances including females, are reported as members, but there is no basis for even an estimate as to the size of families or the proportion of children represented. In the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints all, including children, are considered members, although in reporting membership an age limit of 8 years was adopted.

Total number.—The number of communicants or members is given for 1890 and 1906 by denominations in detail in Table 8 (page 514). The table on page 25 shows the situation in regard to membership in the principal denominational families and separate denominations, and gives, first, the number of organizations reporting membership in 1906 and the percentage which they form of the total number of organizations in the body; second, the total number of communicants or members reported by these organizations in 1906 as compared with the number reported in 1890; third, the per cent distribution of membership in 1890 and 1906; and, fourth, the actual and relative increase in membership during the sixteen years from 1890 to 1906.

Little difference exists between the various bodies with regard to the proportion of organizations making a report as to membership. Three bodies made a full report, while the majority made a report for from 99.2 to 99.9 per cent of the total number of organizations. The bodies which were most inadequately returned, and the percentage which the organizations reporting membership formed of the total number, are as follows: Universalists, 95.9; Unitarians, 94.4; "all other bodies," 91.6; and Jewish congregations, 65.1. The comparatively low percentage reported for "all other bodies" results from the fact that under this head are included the Chinese Temples and the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, for which no statistics of membership can be given.

Because of the small proportion of Jewish congregations for which a report of members was secured and because of the additional fact that the membership of these congregations, when reported, is limited to a statement of the number of heads of families, the returns of the Jewish membership for 1906 can not be compared with the corresponding returns for other bodies. The basis of reporting the members of Jewish congregations, moreover, was not the same in 1890 as it was in 1906, and hence no comparisons between the two periods are possible for the body itself.

The whole number of communicants or members reported by all the religious bodies in 1906 was 32,936,445, of which 20,287,742, or 61.6 per cent, were returned by the 164 Protestant bodies; 12,079,142, or 36.7 per cent, by the Roman Catholic Church; and 569,561, or 1.7 per cent, by 21 other bodies. Of the 20,597,954 communicants or members given in the report for 1890, the Protestant bodies contributed 14,007,187, or 68 per cent; the Roman Catholic Church 6,241,708, or 30.3 per cent; and all the remaining bodies 349,059, or 1.7 per cent.

In considering these figures showing the relative importance of the different bodies with respect to the number of communicants or members, it should be borne constantly in mind that among the Jewish congregations, the Roman Catholic Church, and the Protestant bodies, differences in the requirements for membership exist which prevent statistics based on membership from being an accurate index of the religious affiliations of the population of the United States. The Jewish congregations include as members only the heads of families. The Roman Catholic Church includes as members all persons baptized into the church, and it requires that all children of members shall be baptized as soon as possible, thereby themselves becoming members. The Protestant bodies, as a rule, admit as members only those who, after reaching fairly mature age, declare their desire to join the church. The difference in respect to age at membership between the Protestant bodies and the Roman Catholic Church has been in part eliminated, as explained on page 24, but this correction, even, does not make the figures an accurate index of the religious affiliations of the population. The membership of the Roman Catholic Church includes practically all persons who regard themselves as affiliated with that church. The rules of the Protestant bodies, on the other hand, are such that many persons who regard themselves as affiliated with these bodies are not included because they have not seen fit to fulfill the requirements of membership; and there is, furthermore, no reliable basis for determining the number of actual adherents of the various Protestant denominations. As an index of religious affiliation of the population, therefore, the statistics of membership here presented are misleading, for while giving practically the true number of Roman Catholics in the population at least 10 years of age, they largely understate the number of Hebrews, and, to a less degree, the number of Protestants. For this reason such figures should not be used, without reservation, to determine the religious affiliation of the population.

[5] As the figures for the two censuses are not comparable, the increase can not be shown.

Since the basis of determining membership in the Roman Catholic Church and in the Protestant bodies has not changed essentially between the two censuses, the figures for membership can be used to determine the relative growth of the two bodies. This is indicated by the figures given in the foregoing table, and is also presented graphically in Diagram 1. The membership of the Protestant bodies has increased 6,280,555, or 44.8 per cent, while the membership of the Roman Catholic Church has increased 5,837,434, or 93.5 per cent. In view of the great volume of immigration to this country since 1890,[1] the increase of 93.5 per cent for the Roman Catholic Church does not seem to be greater than would naturally be expected.

Among the Protestant bodies, the Methodist bodies rank first in number of members, with 5,749,838, or 17.5 per cent of the total number, and the Baptist bodies come next, with 5,662,234 members, or 17.2 per cent. These 2 families constitute somewhat more than one-third of the entire Protestant membership of the country. If to these be added the Lutheran bodies, with 2,112,494 members, the Presbyterian bodies, with 1,830,555 members, the Disciples or Christians, with 1,142,359 members—each comprising more than a million members—the 5 bodies combined include 16,497,480 members, or fully one-half (50.2 per cent) of the membership of all religious bodies in the United States and more than four-fifths (81.3 per cent) of all the members of Protestant bodies.

As compared with the returns for 1890, each of these families shows an increase. In respect to the actual increase in numbers the Baptist bodies lead with 1,949,766, and are followed by the Methodist bodies with 1,160,554, the Lutheran bodies with 881,422, the Presbyterian bodies with 552,704, and the Disciples or Christians with 501,308.

The rank of these 5 Protestant families in the percentage of increase shows, however, some notable variations from the rank as based on actual numbers. The Disciples or Christians lead with 78.2 per cent; then come the Lutheran bodies with 71.6 per cent, the Baptist bodies with 52.5 per cent, the Presbyterian bodies with 43.3 per cent, and the Methodist bodies with 25.3 per cent.

With respect to the membership reported for the Church of Christ, Scientist—85,717 in 1906—it should be noted that, in accordance with the policy and practice of this body, many are counted as members of the central organization in Boston, called the "Mother Church," who are also members of branch churches throughout the world. It is probable, as learned from an authoritative source, that the duplication of membership thus occasioned amounts to nearly, if not quite, one-half of the membership of the Mother Church (41,309). No deduction has been made on this account from the number of members reported for the body.

The summary on page 27 gives for the families, or denominations, having at least 50,000 members in 1906, the rank in number of members, in actual increase in membership, and in relative increase in membership.

Taking the figures given in this summary for the 5 leading denominational families, in conjunction with those for the membership as reported in detail for each denomination in Table 8 (page 514), it appears that of the 5,749,838 members reported for all Methodist bodies in 1906, fully four-fifths are contained in two denominations, namely, the Methodist Episcopal Church, with 2,986,154 members, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with 1,638,480 members. In 1890 the Methodist Episcopal Church had 2,240,354 members, so that the figures for 1906 represent a gain for that church of 745,800, or 33.3 per cent. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South had 1,209,976 members in 1890, so that the gain for that church was 428,504, or 35.4 per cent. The membership of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, the next largest body, shows a gain of 42,052, or 9.3 per cent, having advanced from 452,725 in 1890 to 494,777 in 1906. Considerable gains are also noted for the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church (33.7 per cent) and for the Methodist Protestant Church (25.7 per cent).

The figures reported for the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, on the other hand, indicate a very decided loss in membership. According to the report for 1890, this denomination then had 349,788 members, but the number returned for 1906 is only 184,542, a loss of 165,246, or 47.2 per cent. The method of securing the statistics of this denomination for 1906 has been such as to preclude the probability of any great error with respect to either the number of communicants or any of the other items of inquiry. The statistics, in all cases, were obtained direct, from either the pastors or the presiding elders, and the greater part of them were secured by a personal canvass made by agents sent out from the Census Bureau. Furthermore, the figures have been subjected to a most careful scrutiny and verification from authoritative sources and are believed to be substantially correct; it is quite evident, therefore, that the number of communicants given in the report for 1890 was too high. This seems all the more probable, too, when it is considered that the statistics for 1906, as compared with those given in the report for 1890, show that, although the present number of communicants is not much more than one-half the former number, there have been substantial increases in the number of organizations (29.3 per cent) and in the number of church edifices (34.3 per cent) and a very material increase (78.1 per cent) in the value of church property.

The 3 conventions of the Baptist denomination have 5,323,183 members, out of a total of 5,662,234 for all Baptist bodies in 1906, and each shows a very considerable gain as compared with 1890. The Northern Baptist Convention, with 1,052,105 members in 1906, shows an increase since 1890 of 252,080, or 31.5 per cent; the Southern Baptist Convention, with 2,009,471 members in 1906, an increase of 729,405, or 57 per cent; and the National Baptist Convention (Colored), with 2,261,607 members in 1906, an increase of 912,618, or 67.7 per cent. It should be noted in this connection that churches belonging to colored Baptist associations in Northern states, which were included in the statistics for the Northern Baptist Convention in 1890, are now given in connection with the statistics for the National Baptist Convention, and that for this reason the figures for the 2 bodies for 1906 are not entirely comparable with those for 1890. It was the judgment of the Bureau of the Census, and it was concurred in by representatives of the 2 conventions, that Baptist associations composed exclusively of colored organizations, in whatever part of the country, should properly be included in the National Baptist Convention, since they appear to be claimed by that convention, and particularly in view of the fact, also, that such inclusion would not affect the totals for the Baptist denomination as a whole, including the 3 conventions. The 2 Primitive Baptist bodies show a gain since 1890 of 21,116, or 18.2 per cent, while of the smaller Baptist bodies, 4 show an increase, 5 a decrease, and 2 were not reported in 1890.

Of the 2,112,494 members reported for the 24 Lutheran bodies in 1906, fully nine-tenths are contained in 7 bodies, each comprising over 100,000 members, namely, Synodical Conference, 648,529 members; General Council, 462,177 members; General Synod, 270,221 members; United Norwegian Church, 185,027 members; Joint Synod of Ohio and Other States, 123,408 members; Synod of Iowa and Other States, 110,254 members; and Norwegian Synod, 107,712 members. As compared with 1890, each of these 7 bodies shows a very material increase in membership, the lowest being 54.2 per cent, for the United Norwegian Church, and the highest, 128 per cent, for the Synod of Iowa and Other States.

Among the Presbyterian bodies the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America is much the largest body and, with 1,179,566 members in 1906, comprises very nearly two-thirds of the entire membership reported for these bodies as a whole; it had 787,743 members in 1890, showing a gain of 391,823, or 49.7 per cent. The Presbyterian Church in the United States, although a much smaller body, shows a substantially similar gain (48.2 per cent), having 266,345 members in 1906, as against 179,721 in 1890. The Cumberland Presbyterian Church, with 195,770 members, shows a gain since 1890 of 18.7 per cent, and the United Presbyterian Church of North America, with 130,342 members in 1906, a gain of 38.1 per cent. It should here be stated that, in view of the fact that the union between the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church was not fully consummated at the close of the year 1906, but was in a state of transition, no attempt is made to give the statistics for the united body. On account, also, of this unsettled condition, the statistics here given separately for each of the 2 bodies represent as near as may be the condition at the close of the ecclesiastical year, March, 1906, before the union had taken place, instead of at the close of the calendar year, as in the case of the other denominations.

The Disciples or Christians, returned as a single body in 1890, show a large gain in membership, but the number of communicants or members reported for 1906 is very unevenly divided between the 2 bodies, the Disciples of Christ showing 982,701, or 86 per cent, and the Churches of Christ, 159,658, or 14 per cent.

In this general increase immigration has had a large share, especially in the Lutheran bodies, the German Evangelical Synod, the Roman Catholic Church, and the Eastern Orthodox Churches. That other influences have also been effective is apparent from the increase in several bodies not materially affected by immigration—for example, the Disciples or Christians, which show an increase of 78.2 per cent, and the Protestant Episcopal Church, which shows an increase of 66.7 per cent.

The figures thus far presented concerning communicants or members have dealt with the total number reported. The following table shows, for each of the principal families or denominations, the average number of communicants or members per organization in 1906.

The Roman Catholic Church reported the highest number of communicants or members per organization, 969. The Eastern Orthodox Churches, which ranked second in this respect, reported 315; while the German Evangelical Synod of North America, the Protestant body ranking highest as to membership per organization, reported 245. For the Protestant bodies as a whole the average number of members per organization was 104, less than one-ninth the average number for the Roman Catholic Church.

The average size of the organizations is, of course, the result of many factors. Denominations which are largely centered in urban communities naturally have much larger organizations than those which are scattered through rural districts. The concentration of the members of the Roman Catholic Church in the states of the North Atlantic division, which have a large proportion of urban population, doubtless accounts in part for the large average size of the organizations of that body. The form of government of the denominations also plays an important part. Those in which ecclesiastical authority is highly centralized can develop large organizations more readily than those in which each congregation is highly independent. Then, too, the general policy of the denominations enters into the question; and as a result of these factors it is not surprising to find a variation in the average number of members per organization from 37 in the case of the Adventist bodies to 969 in the case of the Roman Catholic Church.

[1] Heads of families only.

Distribution by sex.—An inquiry was made in 1890 and again in 1906 as to the total number of communicants or members, but at the latter investigation the inquiry was extended to include the number of males and females as well. Statistics are here presented for the first time, therefore, giving substantially the sex distribution of the members of all the religious bodies in the United States. The returns, although secured for the individual church organizations, had to be based in some cases upon estimates rather than upon an exact enumeration, but a comparison of these estimates with the returns in which the report of sex is complete shows such agreement that the figures presented may be considered to represent accurately the general situation in this regard.

The table on page 30 shows for each family or separate denomination comprising more than 25,000 members, first, the number and per cent of organizations reporting sex; second, the total number of communicants or members and the number and per cent for whom sex is reported; and third, the number and per cent of each sex so reported.

A full report in regard to the sex of communicants or members was made by a few bodies only, the Mennonites and some smaller bodies. For the Congregationalists, the report was substantially complete, as 99.2 per cent of the total number of organizations returned the sex of members. Other religious families and separate denominations furnishing approximately complete returns in regard to sex, with the percentage of organizations reporting in each case, are as follows: Spiritualists, 98.9; Swedish Evangelical bodies, 97.8; Friends, 97.7; Latter-day Saints, 97.3; and Dunkers, 96.6. In some families substantially complete returns were received for certain branches, but the percentage of organizations reporting for the family as a whole was reduced by the markedly incomplete returns for other branches. Thus, for example, the percentage for the Baptist bodies as a whole (92.9) is reduced somewhat by the small proportion of the organizations making a report among the Colored Primitive Baptists in America (40.8 per cent), the Primitive Baptists (73.2 per cent), the Free Baptists (83.9 per cent), and the 8 smaller Baptist bodies (61.7 per cent). Again, among the Lutheran bodies the percentage of organizations reporting for the body as a whole is made low by the small proportion reported for Hauge's Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Synod (71.3 per cent) and the United Norwegian Lutheran Church in America (76.5 per cent).

The sex of communicants is reported for the Unitarians by only 73.1 per cent of its organizations; for the Universalists, by 77.1 per cent; for the Protestant Episcopal Church, by 84.3 per cent; and for the Roman Catholic Church, by 88.4 per cent. For the Eastern Orthodox Churches, also, there is a report of sex for only 25.1 per cent, but this is wholly due to the very incomplete report for the Greek Orthodox Church. In spite of the very low percentage of organizations in this church reporting sex (7.8), the number of members for whom the sex is reported constitutes, as shown in the fourth column of the table, more than one-half (54 per cent) of all the members reported for this body. No distribution by sex is given for the membership of the Jewish congregations, since their membership comprises largely male heads of families.

For some of the smaller bodies, or members of certain of the denominational families, as shown by Table 1 (page 148), a full report of sex has been made, the more notable being the Armenian Church, the Colored Cumberland Presbyterian Church, the Polish National Church, the Finnish Evangelical Lutheran Church of America, or Suomi Synod, and the Slovak Evangelical Lutheran Synod of America.

The percentages showing the proportion of members for whom sex is reported, also given in the table on page 30, are not essentially different from those for organizations, although as a rule they are somewhat larger. The more notable exceptions to this rule are found in the cases of "other Dunkers," the Christian Reformed Church, the German Evangelical Protestant bodies, the Protestant Episcopal Church, the German Evangelical Synod of North America, the Independent churches, and the Lutheran bodies.

The figures indicating the distribution by sex show that, of the total number of communicants or members for which these data were returned, 43.1 per cent are males and 56.9 per cent females. For the Protestant bodies as a whole the difference is greater, for in these bodies 39.3 per cent of the members are males and 60.7 per cent females. For the Roman Catholic Church the percentages are more nearly even, being 49.3 for males and 50.7 for females. For the Eastern Orthodox Churches and for "all other bodies," on the other hand, the percentages of males are very much larger than those for females.

The largest percentage of males shown for any single body is that for the Greek Orthodox Church (93.9) and the next largest is that for the Hungarian Reformed Church in America (68.7). The 3 other bodies of Eastern Orthodox Churches together show 74.3 per cent males, but the percentages for the individual bodies, based upon the figures given in Table 1 (page 148), differ widely. In the Servian Orthodox Church the males form 85.8 per cent of all communicants; in the Russian Orthodox Church, 67.6 per cent; and in the Syrian Orthodox Church, 60.5 per cent. Similarly, the percentage shown for "all other bodies" as a whole (63.7) is not indicative of the conditions existing in the numerous small bodies included thereunder, the percentages for the particular bodies ranging from 75.6 for the Armenian Church to as low as 21.3 for the United Society of Believers (Shakers).

In the Roman Catholic Church the communicants are, as already stated, about equally divided in respect to sex, and this is also true of a number of other bodies, especially among the Lutherans. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, also, shows 48.6 per cent of males and the Christian Reformed Church, 47.9 per cent.

The Methodist and Baptist bodies, collectively, show the same percentages—38.5 per cent males and 61.5 per cent females. The proportion of organizations reporting sex is nearly the same in each, but it should be noted that in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South only 86.6 per cent of the organizations are included. The colored churches of both families are well represented, though in many cases the figures, as before stated, represent estimates rather than an exact enumeration.

[1] Heads of families only.

Among the Presbyterian bodies the smallest percentage of males shown (36.5) is for the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the highest percentage (42) for the Cumberland Presbyterian Church; for some of the 8 other Presbyterian bodies, however, as indicated by the figures in Table 1 (page 148), the percentages of males are considerably higher, as is the case in the Colored Cumberland Presbyterian Church, 46.5; in the Associate Reformed Synod of the South, 44.8; and in the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, 44.4.

The smallest percentage of males shown (27.6) is that for the Church of Christ, Scientist, which is considerably less than that for the Congregationalists (34.1) or for the Seventh-day Adventist Denomination (34.8).

Probably the most important single factor in determining the proportion of the sexes in any denomination is the extent to which the membership of that denomination is composed of immigrants. At the census of 1900 males formed 54.4 per cent of the foreign born population, as contrasted with 50.5 per cent of the native population. The percentage formed by the males, moreover, has been far greater in recent immigration than it was in the foreign born population of 1900. The distribution, by sex, of the immigrants entering this country during the year ending June 30, 1907, is shown in the table on page 32, the figures for which were taken from the annual report of the Commissioner-General of Immigration.

Of the bodies not directly affected by immigration, those represented chiefly in the Southern states show a higher percentage of males than those in the Northern states. Thus the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, reports 40.9 per cent of males; the Southern Baptist Convention, 40.7 per cent; the Presbyterian Church in the United States, 39 per cent; and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, 42 per cent; while the Methodist Episcopal Church reports 37.4 per cent of males; the Northern Baptist Convention, 36.5 per cent; and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 36.5 per cent.

The Churches of Christ, mostly in the Southern states, show 41.5 per cent of male membership, while the Disciples of Christ, chiefly in the Northern states, report 39.7 per cent. The Adventist bodies, Congregationalists, Protestant Episcopal Church, Unitarians, and Universalists, which are strongest in the Northern and Western states, and are not affected to any extent by immigration, all rank below 40 per cent, while others, as the Evangelical and United Brethren bodies, chiefly in the Northern states, but also moderately affected by immigration, hold medium rank at about 40 per cent.

PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Under the head of "places of worship" are included church edifices, halls, schoolhouses, private houses, and other buildings in which religious services or meetings are held.

The term "church edifice" covers those buildings owned in whole or in part by the organizations using them. The building may be consecrated or unconsecrated, a principal building, a chapel, or a mission; if it is a separate building, used for services, and owned in whole or in part by the organization using it, it is classed as a church edifice. In some cases two or more organizations use the same building; if the ownership is divided, each organization is credited with an edifice; if the ownership is with one body and it is rented or used by another body, it is included, in the latter case, under the head of "halls, etc." In a number of cases an organization reports more than one church edifice.

Under the head of "halls, etc.," are included those buildings which are rented by the organizations using them, or which they are permitted by the owners to use for the purposes of their service. Such are church edifices owned by other denominations, college chapels, halls, schoolhouses, private houses, public edifices, etc.

Number of church edifices, halls, etc.—The following table, derived from Table 8 (page 514), shows for the principal families and separate denominations, first, the number of organizations reporting places of worship in 1906; second, the number and the per cent distribution of church edifices reported in 1890 and 1906, with the increase from 1890 to 1906; and third, the number and the per cent distribution of halls, etc., in 1890 and 1906.

[1] Less than one-tenth of 1 per cent. [2] Per cent not shown where base is less than 100. [3] Decrease.

From this table it appears that, with two exceptions, a report as to places of worship has been made by all the denominational families and separate denominations for substantially 90 per cent or more of their organizations. The exceptions are the Jewish congregations, for which the report is very incomplete, covering only 55.6 per cent of the congregations, and the Adventist bodies, for which there is a report for 83.1 per cent of their organizations.

Out of a total of 212,230 organizations 199,831, or 94.2 per cent, made a report as to places of worship. In other words, 12,399 organizations furnished no specific information showing whether they owned a church edifice in whole or in part, or whether they held their services in a rented building, although of course every organization must have had some place of worship.

In number of church edifices the Methodist bodies lead with 59,990, and are followed by the Baptist bodies with 50,092; the Presbyterian bodies with 15,311; the Roman Catholic Church with 11,881; and the Lutheran bodies with 11,194. In regard to the number of halls, etc., the order is somewhat different. In this respect the Baptist bodies lead with 3,250; and are followed by the Methodist bodies with 3,193; the Lutheran bodies with 1,197; the Disciples or Christians with 907; the Adventist bodies with 666; the Roman Catholic Church with 518; and the Presbyterian bodies with 406.

The per cent distribution of church edifices shows that the Methodist bodies and Baptist bodies together own 57.1 per cent, or considerably more than one-half, of all the church edifices reported in 1906. Next to them in order come the Presbyterian bodies with 7.9 per cent; the Roman Catholic Church with 6.2 per cent; the Lutheran bodies with 5.8 per cent; the Disciples or Christians with 4.7 per cent; the Protestant Episcopal Church with 3.6 per cent; and the Congregationalists with 3 per cent.

The denominational families and separate denominations leading in the per cent distribution of halls, etc., are the Baptist bodies, 22 per cent; the Methodist bodies, 21.6 per cent; the Lutheran bodies, 8.1 per cent; the Disciples or Christians, 6.1 per cent; the Adventist bodies, 4.5 per cent; and the Roman Catholic Church, 3.5 per cent.

A comparison with the figures for 1890 shows an increase in the number of church edifices in the different bodies as follows: Methodist bodies, 13,852; Baptist bodies, 12,421; Lutheran bodies, 4,493; Disciples or Christians, 3,716; Roman Catholic Church, 3,097; Presbyterian bodies, 2,846; Protestant Episcopal Church, 1,904; and Congregationalists, 1,056.

In the percentage of increase in the number of church edifices the rank is naturally different. Aside from the Eastern Orthodox Churches and the Church of Christ, Scientist, which are virtually new bodies, and the Independent churches and Jewish congregations, where the conditions are such as scarcely to permit comparison, the order is as follows: Latter-day Saints, 140.5 per cent; Adventist bodies, 90.3 per cent; Disciples or Christians, 69.8 per cent; Lutheran bodies, 67 per cent; German Evangelical Synod of North America, 60.3 per cent; Dunkers, 41.9 per cent; Protestant Episcopal Church, 37.9 per cent; Roman Catholic Church, 35.3 per cent; Evangelical bodies, 33.6 per cent; Baptist bodies, 33 per cent; Reformed bodies, 30.1 per cent; and Methodist bodies, 30 per cent.

In the number of halls, etc., there has been a considerable decrease, accompanied by a general increase in the number of church edifices, showing that church edifices have taken the place of halls and the like. Thus in 1890 the Dunkers reported 1,016 church edifices and 280 halls, or a total of 1,296 places of worship. In 1906 they reported 1,442 church edifices and 59 halls, or a total of 1,501 places of worship, an increase of 205, or 15.8 per cent, in the places of worship, although in church edifices they showed an increase of 41.9 per cent. Similar conditions are found in other bodies. The Presbyterian bodies show an increase in church edifices of 2,846, a decrease in halls, etc., of 946, or a net increase in places of worship of 1,900. The United Brethren bodies show an increase of 485 in the number of church edifices and a decrease of 734 in halls, etc., or a net decrease of 249 in the total number of places of worship. This decrease is due largely to a decrease in the total number of organizations in 1906 as compared with 1890. The only bodies showing an increase in the number of halls, etc., used for worship are the Church of Christ, Scientist, Eastern Orthodox Churches, Independent churches, "other Protestant bodies," and "all other bodies." In regard to all of these the increase in this particular is due probably to comparatively recent organization, rapid growth and extension, and the formation of a considerable number of new organizations which are not strong enough to own church edifices.

Seating capacity of church edifices.—The term "seating capacity" signifies the total number of persons an edifice is arranged to seat. In this report, church edifices alone are taken into consideration, partly because they bear a closer and more significant relation to the church organization than do halls, schoolhouses, etc., and partly because returns for them are more complete. Two things are to be kept in mind: (1) That the figures are almost entirely estimates, since comparatively few church organizations are able to give exact reports; and (2) that in some instances, notably in the case of the Roman Catholic Church, the same edifice is used repeatedly, and by varying congregations.

The following table gives for the principal families and separate denominations, first, the total number of organizations making a report as to seating capacity and the percentage which that number bears to the total organizations reporting church edifices; and, second, the seating capacity of church edifices reported in 1890 and 1906, the per cent distribution at each period, and the increase from 1890 to 1906:

[2] Decrease.

The seating capacity of church edifices in 1906 is very fully reported, the only apparent exception being, as shown by the preceding table, that for "all other bodies." The low percentage there reported is due, in a measure, to the inclusion of the 62 Chinese Temples, for which no report of seating capacity, consistent with the facts, can be made.

The total seating capacity of church edifices in 1906, for all denominations, as reported by 179,954 organizations, was 58,536,830; for the Protestant bodies, as reported by 167,884 organizations, 53,282,445; for the Roman Catholic Church, as reported by 10,303 organizations, 4,494,377; and for the remaining bodies, as reported by 1,767 organizations, 760,008. Thus the average per organization for all denominations is 325; for the Protestant bodies, 317; for the Roman Catholic Church, 436; and for the remaining bodies, 430.

It should be stated that where two or more organizations use the same edifice the seating capacity is reported by each organization separately, and therefore some duplication may result where figures for different denominations are combined. The amount of duplication thus resulting in the grand total for all denominations has not been ascertained for 1906, but for 1890 it was said to be approximately 2,800,000 out of a total seating capacity for church edifices of 43,560,063.

A comparison between the figures for 1890 and those for 1906, if no allowance be made for duplications, indicates that the total seating capacity of church edifices increased in the sixteen years 14,976,767, or 34.4 per cent. The Protestant bodies furnished 89.4 per cent of this increase and the Roman Catholic Church 7.5 per cent. The rate of increase in seating capacity was practically the same in each case—33.6 for the Protestant bodies and 33.3 for the Roman Catholic Church.

Figures showing accommodations or sittings for the censuses of 1850, 1860, and 1870 are available and are presented in Table 15 (page 565). In round numbers, these figures show 14,000,000 seats in 1850, 19,000,000 in 1860, and 22,000,000 in 1870. It is rather interesting to note how this growth in the seating capacity of church edifices has kept pace with the growth of population, and therefore the following tabular statement has been prepared showing the ratio between population and seating capacity of church edifices at different censuses.

According to these figures, the seating capacity of church edifices, in proportion to population, was greater in 1906 than at any preceding census of religious bodies, although it was only slightly greater than in 1890. In 1906, as the summary indicates, the churches could have seated at one time 69.5 per cent of the population. This figure, however, exaggerates the seating capacity because it does not allow for the unknown amount of duplication resulting from the fact that the seating capacity of churches used by two or more organizations was counted for each organization. If it be assumed that this duplication was the same, in proportion to the total seating capacity, as it was said to be in 1890, then the net seating capacity in 1906 was about 54,790,473, and the churches of the country could in that year have seated 65 per cent of the population.

Perhaps more significant is the relation between the church membership and the seating capacity of the church edifice. The figures for communicants or members given in this report were compiled from the returns of each organization without regard to the question whether the organization reported a church edifice, and if it reported one, whether it gave the seating capacity. As a result of this fact a direct comparison between seating capacity and membership would be somewhat misleading, as it would tend to overstate the number of members to be provided for in the church edifices. In the following table for 1906, therefore, the average membership per organization for all organizations reporting membership is compared with the average seating capacity per organization for all organizations reporting the seating capacity of church edifices.

With the single exception of the Roman Catholic Church, all the denominations show an average seating capacity considerably in excess of the average membership. For all the Protestant bodies combined, the average membership per organization reporting membership is 104, while the average seating capacity per organization reporting seating capacity is more than three times that number, or, to give the exact figure, 317. For the Roman Catholic Church the average membership, 969, is almost two and one-fourth times the average seating capacity.

[1] Heads of families only.

Two factors probably combine to account in a large measure for this wide difference between the Protestant bodies and the Roman Catholic Church. Perhaps the more important is that the Roman Catholic Church conducts several services on Sunday morning, each attended by a largely distinct congregation. The Protestant bodies, on the other hand, usually have but one service each Sunday morning. Increasing membership can thus be met to some extent in the Roman Catholic Church by increasing the number of services, while in the Protestant bodies it is met either by increasing the seating capacity, when that in existence is exhausted, or by forming new organizations. The second factor is that the Protestant bodies have to provide for a relatively larger number of nonmembers than does the Roman Catholic Church. Practically all persons over 9 years of age who attend the Roman Catholic Church are included in these statistics as members of that church, but a large number of persons who attend the Protestant churches are not included in these statistics, as they have not become members of the churches.[1]

Another fact which must be borne in mind in using the averages given in the preceding table is, that for any denomination the average number of members per organization is not exactly equivalent to the average number of members per organization owning a church edifice. The average membership per organization owning a church is doubtless considerably larger than the average membership per organization, because the organizations which have not secured a church generally have few members. Thus their inclusion materially lowers the average, and tends to exaggerate the excess of seating capacity over membership, apparent for all bodies except the Roman Catholic Church.

Seating capacity of halls, etc.—Of the 14,791 organizations worshiping in "halls, etc.," in 1906, 9,817 organizations submitted a report on seating capacity, representing a total of 1,546,350, or an average per organization reporting of 158. These figures are not of much significance, however, because the buildings so included—for the most part halls and schoolhouses—were not specially built to meet the requirements of the church organizations using them, as is the case with respect to church edifices proper. The report for 1890 shows, exclusive of the returns for Alaska, a total seating capacity for halls, etc., of 2,450,518, as reported by 23,332 organizations, including, however, many private houses for which the seating capacity could not be given. For the reason stated, therefore, no figures indicating the seating capacity of halls, etc., are presented in the general tables.

VALUE OF CHURCH PROPERTY.

Under the head of "value of church property" is included the estimated value in 1906 of the buildings owned and used for worship by the organizations reporting, together with the value of their sites, and of their furniture, organs, bells, etc. It does not include the value of rented buildings or halls, nor of parsonages, parochial school buildings, theological seminaries, monasteries, convents, or the like. In some cases the church edifice was combined with a parish house, a parsonage, or a school, while the site sometimes included a cemetery. When these were identified with the church edifice, so that practically no distinction could be made between them, their value is necessarily included in the value of the church property reported. In the case of monasteries or convents, the value of chapels is not reported except where they were separate and distinct buildings. When an organization worshiped in a rented building but at the same time owned a lot on which it expected to build, the value of the lot is included. Wherever two or more organizations shared the ownership of a church edifice, each is credited with its proper proportion of the value—one-half, one-third, etc., as the case may be.

The value of church property is given for 1890 and 1906 by denominations in detail in Table 8 (page 514). The next table gives, for principal families and separate denominations, first, the number of organizations reporting the value of church property owned by them and the percentage which they represent of the total number reporting; second, the value of church property reported in 1890 and in 1906 together with the per cent distribution of this property in each year; and, third, the amount and per cent of increase in value of church property from 1890 to 1906.

According to that table, reports as to the value of church property owned were made by 186,132 organizations, or 87.7 per cent of the total number. The organizations for which no statistics as to property owned are presented consist largely of organizations which were worshiping in rented halls, in other rented buildings, or in private houses, and consequently owned no property which could be reported, although it is undoubtedly true that some organizations which owned property failed to make any report concerning it. In regard to the number of organizations reporting, the rank of the different denominations is much the same as in respect to places of worship, the largest number being shown for Methodist bodies.

[1] Less than one-tenth of 1 per cent. [2] Decrease.

The total value of church property reported in 1906, for all denominations, was $1,257,575,867, of which $935,942,578 was reported for Protestant bodies, $292,638,787 for the Roman Catholic Church, and $28,994,502 for all the remaining bodies. The following statement shows the principal families and separate denominations arranged in the order of the value of church property as reported by them, together with the average value per organization reporting:

DENOMINATION.	TOTAL VALUE OF CHURCH PROPERTY REPORTED: 1906.		AVERAGE VALUE OF CHURCH PROPERTY REPORTED PER ORGANIZATION REPORTING.

Mennonite bodies	1,237,134	23	2,489	21
Eastern Orthodox Churches	964,791	24	10,840	9

In the consideration of the foregoing statistics it must be kept in mind that some bodies are not very fully represented. For example, for the Jewish congregations only 747 organizations, or considerably less than one-half the entire number, reported the value of church property owned by them, and, similarly, for the Church of Christ, Scientist, only 401 organizations, or not much more than three-fifths of the entire number, made a report. For the Roman Catholic Church, only a little more than four-fifths of the total number of organizations made any report of property owned, while the Eastern Orthodox Churches as a whole show a report for only about one-fifth of all their organizations. In these, and in other cases, there has not been, therefore, a full report of the value of church property, and the total amounts shown, even though large in themselves, do not, in all probability, represent the whole amount of property owned and used for worship by the several denominations.

The figures given for 1890, like those for 1906, probably represent the value of church property so far as reported, and, similarly, do not stand for the entire value of church property owned and used for worship at that period.

It should also be noted that under the head of "other Protestant bodies" are included some denominations, as the Plymouth Brethren and Christadelphians, which are averse to the use of special buildings for worship; and others, as some of the Evangelistic associations and the Nonsectarian Churches of Bible Faith, which are principally evangelistic in character, or are widely scattered in small communities and worship to a considerable extent in tents, school buildings, or private houses.

The statement would seem to indicate that those religious bodies which are largely concentrated in cities, or which usually have large congregations to provide for, reported the highest average value of church property owned, while many bodies which show a large number of organizations and of communicants or members, but are principally located in rural districts, show a comparatively small average value. Thus the two families which together reported more than one-half of the total number of church edifices returned in 1906, the Methodists and Baptists, represent less than one-third of the total value of church property reported and have a low rank in average value per organization reporting, while the Unitarians, Jewish congregations, and Roman Catholic Church, which are largely concentrated in or near cities, stand at the head in respect to average value. The Unitarians, with church property valued at $14,263,277, as reported by 406 organizations, have a comparatively low rank in total value, but are first in point of average value, with an average of $35,131 for each organization reporting. The Jewish congregations, with property valued at $23,198,925, as reported by 747 organizations, rank just above the Unitarians in total value, but are second with respect to average value, with an average of $31,056. The Roman Catholic Church, which is first in point of total value of church property reported, $292,638,787, comes third in the average value per organization reporting, with $28,431, and is followed by the Church of Christ, Scientist, and the Protestant Episcopal Church, with average values per organization of $21,961 and $20,644, respectively.

The conditions in regard to single denominations in the denominational families are in many cases quite different, as indicated by the figures in Table 1 (page 148). The Northern Baptist Convention, with 17.6 per cent of the total number of organizations in the three Baptist conventions which reported value of church property, has 55.8 per cent of the total value of church property reported, and an average value per organization reporting of $9,573. On the other hand, the Southern Baptist Convention, with 42.1 per cent of the number of organizations reporting, has only 26 per cent of the total value of church property, and an average value per organization reporting of $1,860.

The situation is similar in the Methodist bodies. The Methodist Episcopal Church, with 47.2 per cent of the entire number of organizations in the family reporting value of church property, had 71.2 per cent of the total value of church property reported, and an average value per organization reporting of $5,858; while the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with 26.8 per cent of the total number of organizations in the family reporting value of church property, shows 16.2 per cent of the total value of church property reported, and an average value per organization reporting of $2,351.

The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, with 52.3 per cent of the entire number of Presbyterian organizations reporting, has 76.5 per cent of the total value of church property reported, and shows an average value per organization reporting of $15,514, as against an average value of $11,411 for the United Presbyterian Church, and of $5,665 for the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

It is also to be noted that those bodies which are numerically strongest in the Northern and Eastern states, as the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the Roman Catholic Church, show higher average values than those whose strength is chiefly in the Southern states, as the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the Presbyterian Church in the United States, and the Southern Baptist Convention. The relatively high rank in average values held by those bodies most affected by immigration, as the Lutheran bodies and the German Evangelical Synod, may be considered as indicative in general of their prosperous character.

Of the total value of church property ($3,168,548) shown for the 2 bodies comprising the Latter-day Saints, $2,645,363 was reported for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, more commonly known as the Utah branch. This sum represents the amount reported by the individual wards—equivalent to church organizations in other denominations—but is exclusive of the value of church property used for the purposes of the stakes and of the church in general, including the Temple, Tabernacle, and Assembly Hall at Salt Lake City, as well as other edifices, and representing an aggregate value of $7,766,750.

The increase from 1890 to 1906 in the value of church property reported was $578,149,378, of which $386,246,871 represents the increase in the value of the property reported by Protestant bodies, and $174,515,441 the increase in the value of the property reported by the Roman Catholic Church. The Methodist bodies reported the largest increase of any of the Protestant denominations, $97,310,817, and were followed by the Baptist bodies with an increase of $57,514,533, and the Presbyterian bodies with an increase of $55,328,099. The decrease shown for the Friends is explained partly by a general decrease in the value of the property reported by the Hicksite organizations, but more particularly by the fact that, probably as a result of a clerical error in the schedules for the Orthodox Friends for 1890, a church edifice, with a reported value in 1906 of $98,000, was given a value in 1890 of $1,000,000 instead of the more probable value, $100,000. If allowance is made for this, the 4 bodies of Friends would show a gain of over $216,000, instead of an apparent loss of $683,883, as shown in the table.

The percentage of increase shown for the different families varies greatly. Leaving out of consideration the phenomenal increases shown for the Church of Christ, Scientist, and the Eastern Orthodox Churches, the property reported by the Latter-day Saints more than trebled in value, while the Independent churches, the Roman Catholic Church, the Disciples or Christians, the Jewish congregations, the Lutheran bodies, the Dunkers, and the German Evangelical Synod of North America, reported increases of more than 100 per cent. These large percentages of increase are explained partly by the change from the use of halls to the use of regular church edifices, and partly by the addition of new organizations as the result of immigration, notably in the Roman Catholic Church, the Lutheran bodies, the German Evangelical Synod of North America, and similar denominations.

The census reports for 1850, 1860, and 1870 also give the value of church property, the amounts being as shown in Table 15 (page 565). The following tabular statement shows the value of church property reported for each census at which such statistics were obtained, together with the percentage of increase between censuses:

YEAR.	VALUE OF CHURCH PROPERTY REPORTED.
	Amount.	Per cent of increase over value at preceding census.
1906	$1,257,575,867	85.1
1890	679,426,489	91.7
1870	354,483,581	106.8
1860	171,397,932	96.3
1850	87,328,801	.....

The figures shown for the earlier periods are undoubtedly subject to the same limitations as those already indicated in the case of the figures for 1906, but on their face show a very considerable advance from one census to another in the value of property held for purposes of worship. The per capita increase is shown in the following statement:

YEAR.	Population.	Per capita value of church property.
1906	[1] 84,246,252	$14.93
1890	[2] 62,947,714	10.79
1870	38,558,371	9.19
1860	31,443,321	5.45
1850	23,191,876	3.77

[1] Estimated.
[2] Includes the population of Indian Territory and Indian reservations.

The value of church property reported for 1870 is probably on a currency basis rather than a gold basis, but the report on religious statistics at that census does not afford definite information on this point.

DEBT ON CHURCH PROPERTY.

The amount of debt on church property owned and used for worship was ascertained for the first time in the present census investigation. A report was made on this point by 33,617 organizations out of a total of 186,132 organizations reporting value of church property—that is, less than one-fifth (18.1 per cent) of the organizations to which the inquiry was applicable report a debt. While there are probably some organizations which failed to make a report, it is to be presumed that the remaining 152,515 organizations for the most part held their church property free of debt. The total amount of debt reported, for all denominations, was $108,050,946, representing 8.6 per cent of the total value of all church property reported as owned and used for worship in 1906. The distribution of this amount of debt and its relation to the value of church property reported is given by principal families and separate denominations in the table on page 40.

Of the total number of organizations reporting debt, as shown by this table, 28,797 belonged to Protestant bodies, 4,104 to the Roman Catholic Church, and 716 to the remaining bodies. Of the Jewish congregations that reported the value of church property, 60.1 per cent also reported debt; while the corresponding percentage for the Roman Catholic Church is 39.9 per cent; for the German Evangelical Synod of North America, 35 per cent; for the Independent churches, 28.5 per cent; for the Lutheran bodies, 27.6 per cent; and for the Reformed bodies, 26.4 per cent. On the other hand, a debt on church property was reported by only 5.5 per cent of the organizations of Friends that reported the value of church property, 6.2 per cent of those connected with Mennonite bodies, and 7.8 per cent of those belonging to the Christians (Christian Connection).

Of the total amount of debt, $53,301,254 was reported by Protestant bodies, $49,488,055 by the Roman Catholic Church, $4,556,571 by the Jewish congregations, and $705,066 by all the remaining bodies. Among the Protestant bodies, the largest amount of debt reported is $12,272,463 for the Methodist bodies, while the Baptist bodies reported a debt of $8,323,862; the Lutheran bodies, a debt of $7,859,469; and the Presbyterian bodies, a debt of $6,545,025.

The amount of debt reported represents, for all denominations, as before stated, 8.6 per cent of the total value of church property reported. For the Protestant bodies as a whole the proportion is 5.7 per cent and for the Roman Catholic Church, 16.9 per cent. The highest proportion, 30.1 per cent, is shown for the Eastern Orthodox Churches, followed by the Jewish congregations with 19.6 per cent; the German Evangelical Synod of North America with 12.4 per cent; the Independent churches with 12.2 per cent; and the Lutheran bodies with 10.5 per cent. The smallest proportions shown are seven-tenths of 1 per cent for the Mennonite bodies, 1.1 per cent for the Friends, 2.3 per cent for the Unitarians, 3 per cent for the Dunkers, and 3.5 per cent for the Latter-day Saints.

[1] Per cent not shown where base is less than 100.

In general a large number of organizations reporting debt, and a large amount of debt reported, indicate one of two conditions—rapid extension in the number of organizations to supply the demand of new communities, resulting largely from recent immigration, or enlargement in church accommodations to meet the congested conditions in cities. Certain of the smaller bodies (see Table 1, page 148), as the Plymouth Brethren, which as a rule do not own church edifices, report a small amount of property and very little debt. A few bodies make no report of debt, although in these cases it is not always clear whether they have failed to report, or whether they had no debt to report. The general presumption is, however, that they had no debt to report.

In some cases the smaller denominations report a greater debt than most of the larger bodies. Thus 9 out of the 11 organizations in the Hungarian Reformed Church reporting value of church property showed debts averaging $7,883, and representing 57.4 per cent of the total value of their church property. In the Metropolitan Church Association 4 organizations reported value of church property, and of these, 3 reported debts amounting to $74,000, or 62.6 per cent of the total value of church property reported, and averaging $24,667. The colored bodies, as a rule, show a higher percentage of organizations reporting debt, and the debts represent a higher percentage of the total value of church property reported, but the average debt per organization is lower than is the case in the white bodies. Thus in the African Methodist Episcopal Church 40.9 per cent of the organizations reporting value of church property showed debts amounting to 10.5 per cent of the total value given for the entire denomination, but averaging only $463 per organization, while in the Methodist Episcopal Church the debt as stated by 16.7 per cent of the organizations reporting value of church property amounted to only 5.3 per cent of the total value, while the average debt per organization reporting was $1,853. The situation in other colored churches is essentially the same as in the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The average amount of debt per organization reporting varies from $12,058, for the Roman Catholic Church, to $293, for the Mennonite bodies. The highest averages after the Roman Catholic Church are: Jewish congregations, $10,148; Eastern Orthodox Churches, $5,012; Protestant Episcopal Church, $4,877; and Church of Christ, Scientist, $4,447. It thus appears that the heaviest debts are borne by those bodies largely represented in cities which aim to provide for large congregations and which erect elaborate edifices.

VALUE OF PARSONAGES.

In response to this inquiry, made for the first time in 1906, parsonages were reported by 54,214 organizations, constituting 25.5 per cent of all the organizations represented, as shown by the following table.

DENOMINATION.	ORGANIZATIONS REPORTING PARSONAGES: 1906.		VALUE OF PARSONAGES REPORTED: 1906.

All other bodies	22	2.9	87,700	3,986

The largest proportion of organizations reporting parsonages shown in the table is for the German Evangelical Synod of North America, 64.2 per cent of all the organizations for this denomination reporting that parsonages were owned by them. Other denominations showing a relatively large number of organizations reporting parsonages are the Reformed bodies, for which the proportion is 52.4 per cent; the Roman Catholic Church, for which it is 51 per cent; and the Congregationalists, for which it is 47.1 per cent; while for the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Lutheran bodies, the Evangelical bodies, the Presbyterian bodies, and the Methodist bodies, it exceeded 30 per cent in each case. In many instances members of the same denominational family show wide variations. Thus, as indicated by the figures in Table 1 (page 148), 31.2 per cent of the organizations connected with the Northern Baptist Convention reported parsonages, as compared with 6 per cent for the Southern Baptist Convention and 3.8 per cent for the National Baptist Convention (Colored). Similarly, 40.8 per cent of the organizations reported for the Methodist Episcopal Church reported parsonages, against 22.4 per cent for the African Methodists as a whole.

Among the Reformed bodies the Christian Reformed Church and the Reformed Church in America lead, with percentages of 78.2 and 74.2, respectively, and these are the highest percentages reported by any denomination, exceeding considerably that already noted for the German Evangelical Synod (64.2). The Reformed Church in the United States, on the other hand, shows but 41.7 per cent. The Lutheran bodies, as a whole, show 39.3 per cent, but parsonages are reported by 54.9 per cent of the organizations in the Synodical Conference and 49 per cent of those in each of the Synods of Iowa and Ohio. It is noticeable that in general the highest percentages are reported by denominations of European origin, while those of British or distinctively American origin show much lower percentages.

The 54,214 parsonages thus reported are valued, in the aggregate, at $143,495,853, and are distributed as follows: Protestant bodies, 47,714 parsonages, valued at $106,710,596; Roman Catholic Church, 6,360 parsonages, valued at $36,302,064; and the remaining bodies, 140 parsonages, valued at $483,193. Among the Protestant denominations, the Methodist bodies lead with 20,837 parsonages, valued at $36,420,655, followed by the Presbyterian bodies, with 5,417 parsonages, valued at $16,155,861; the Protestant Episcopal Church, with 2,706 parsonages, valued at $13,207,084; and the Lutheran bodies, with 4,994 parsonages, valued at $11,521,988.

In average value of parsonages the Church of Christ, Scientist, leads with an average of $14,325, but this is based upon a report as to parsonages for less than 1 per cent of all the organizations in that denomination. The Roman Catholic Church is second, with an average of $5,708; and is followed by the Unitarians, with an average of $5,085; and by the Protestant Episcopal Church, with an average of $4,881. In a number of cases, especially in the Roman Catholic and Protestant Episcopal churches, parsonages are frequently combined with parish houses, which partially explains their high average values. In the Hungarian Reformed Church and the Eastern Orthodox Churches, only a few parsonages are reported, but the average value is high, $4,417 and $4,039, respectively.

The parsonages reported for Congregationalists, the Presbyterian, Baptist, and Methodist bodies, and to a certain extent also for the Lutheran bodies, are very largely in towns or country districts, and this accounts, in general, for the low averages.

SUMMARY OF STATISTICS FOR STATES AND TERRITORIES.

The statistics of religious bodies are presented in detail by states and territories in Tables 2, 3, and 9 of the general tables. Table 2 (page 154) gives a summary of the statistics for 1906 for all denominations; Table 3 (page 156) shows the distribution of the communicants or members reported for 1906 by denominations in detail; and Table 9 (page 520) presents a comparative statement of the population, number of church organizations, number of communicants or members, places of worship, and value of church property reported for 1890 and 1906, respectively.

GENERAL SUMMARY FOR 1906.

The following table shows for each state and territory the estimated population in 1906, the number of organizations and of communicants or members, the value of church property reported, and the amount of debt reported on church property, together with the proportion of the total for continental United States reported by each state and territory, and the rank of each. The states and territories are arranged under each head according to their rank.

It will be observed from the table that the several percentages for each particular state are approximately uniform and that with few exceptions no one state shows a marked variation. Thus Illinois has 6.4 per cent of the total population, 4.4 per cent of the number of organizations, 6.3 per cent of the number of communicants or members, 5.3 per cent of the value of church property, and 5.8 per cent of the amount of debt on church property. Ohio reports 5.3 per cent of the population, 4.7 per cent of the number of organizations, 5.3 per cent of the number of communicants or members, 5.9 per cent of the value of church property, and 4.8 per cent of the amount of debt. Among the states of small population, Washington reports seven-tenths of 1 per cent of the population, eight-tenths of 1 per cent of the number of organizations, six-tenths of 1 per cent of the number of communicants or members, six-tenths of 1 per cent of the value of church property, and eight-tenths of 1 per cent of the amount of debt. Greater variations, however, may be noted in respect to the value of church property and the amount of debt on church property. Although New York has only 9.8 per cent of the total population and Pennsylvania only 8.2 per cent, New York reports 20.3 per cent of the entire amount of church property in the country and Pennsylvania 13.8 per cent; while in respect to debt, New York reports 26.3 per cent of the entire amount and Pennsylvania 14.4 per cent.

With regard to the relative rank of the states under the several heads, however, there is considerable variation. Thus New York ranks first in population, in number of communicants or members, in value of church property, and in amount of debt on church property, but fifth in number of organizations. Pennsylvania ranks first in number of organizations and second in every other particular. Ohio ranks fourth in every particular except in debt on church property, in which respect it occupies the sixth place. Texas ranks fifth in population, second in number of organizations, sixth in number of communicants or members, sixteenth in value of church property, and nineteenth in amount of debt on church property. Rhode Island ranks thirty-fifth in population, forty-fourth in number of organizations, thirtieth in number of communicants or members and in value of church property, but seventeenth in amount of debt on church property. The only 2 states which hold the same rank in every particular are the lowest on the list—Wyoming and Nevada.

The 10 leading states in respect to population include 50.7 per cent, more than one-half, of the entire population of the country, but only 41.9 per cent of the total number of organizations reported. On the other hand, they contain 52.4 per cent of the total communicants or members, 62.9 per cent of the value of church property reported, and 66.8 per cent of the total amount of debt reported on church property. Of the 10 states ranking highest in population, Massachusetts, Indiana, and Michigan are superseded, though not in the same order, by Alabama, North Carolina, and Tennessee, when the 10 ranking highest in respect to number of organizations are considered; similarly Texas, Michigan, and Georgia are superseded, in value of church property, by New Jersey, Iowa, and Connecticut; and Texas, Indiana, Michigan, and Georgia, in amount of debt on church property, by New Jersey, Wisconsin, Connecticut, and California.

In regard to the number of communicants or members, Wisconsin, which ranks ninth in respect to church membership, stands twelfth in population; while Indiana, which ranks eighth in population, is eleventh in respect to church membership. The relative rank of the states depends largely on the relative number of Roman Catholic inhabitants. Where there is a large representation of members of this church the state ranks relatively high in communicants, value of church property, and debt on church property. This explains why Wisconsin, with a Roman Catholic membership constituting 50.5 per cent of the total church membership of the state, stands three places higher in respect to church membership than in respect to population; and why Indiana, with a Roman Catholic membership constituting only 18.6 per cent of the total, stands three places lower in respect to church membership than in respect to population.

Average per organization.—A comparison of the number of communicants or members, the value of church property, and the amount of debt on church property, with the number of organizations reported for the different states, shows a considerable difference in the average per organization under these heads, as is set forth in the following table, in which the states and territories are arranged in the order of the number of communicants or members:

[1] Oklahoma and Indian Territory combined.

From this table it appears that the highest average church membership per organization is reported by Rhode Island, 522. It is followed by Massachusetts with 516, the District of Columbia with 475, and New York with 389. The smallest averages reported are by Oklahoma, 58; Florida, 66; Arkansas, 69; and West Virginia, 75. An average membership of less than 100 is reported by 12 states; of 100 or over but less than 200, by 23 states; of 200 or over but less than 300, by 7 states; and of 300 or over, by 7 states.

In respect to the value of church property, an average per organization of $10,000 or over is reported by 9 states; of over $5,000 but less than $10,000, by 15 states; of over $2,000 but less than $5,000, by 16 states; and of less than $2,000, by 9 states. The highest average reported is for the District of Columbia, $41,256; the second highest, for New York, $30,581; and the third, for Massachusetts, $30,500. The lowest averages are those reported by Arkansas, $1,309, and Mississippi, $1,377. In regard to the amount of debt, an average per organization of $10,000 or over is reported by 2 states; of over $5,000 but less than $10,000, by 4 states; of $1,000 or over but less than $5,000, by 30 states; and of less than $1,000, by 13 states. The highest average is reported by New York, $12,400, and the lowest by Mississippi, $325.

The high averages under each head are reported in most instances by states in which a large proportion of the church membership belongs to the Roman Catholic Church, which, as has been shown previously (see pages 28 and 40), reported the largest average membership, and the largest average amount of debt, per organization, of any of the more important religious bodies. The relative proportions of urban and rural population in the different states also have an influence upon the figures. Thus the average size of the organization will naturally be much smaller in states where the population is distributed to a large extent through small rural communities than where it is concentrated in cities or large towns, and similarly the average value of property, and the average amount of debt, will be relatively high in states which are largely urban in character, and low in states where the population is mainly rural.

DISTRIBUTION OF COMMUNICANTS OR MEMBERS BY PRINCIPAL FAMILIES AND DENOMINATIONS.

The next two tables give the number and per cent distribution, by principal families and separate denominations, of the total church membership reported for the several states and territories in 1890 and 1906. The distribution of communicants or members, by principal families or denominations, as set forth in these tables, is also illustrated in Diagram 2.

From the table showing the communicants or members for 1906 it appears that a majority of the communicants or members reported in 29 states belonged to Protestant bodies; in 16 states, to the Roman Catholic Church; and in 1 state, to the Latter-day Saints.

In 1890 a majority of the communicants or members in 34 states belonged to Protestant bodies; in 12 states, to the Roman Catholic Church; and in 2 states, to the Latter-day Saints; while in 1 state the Roman Catholic Church had a plurality. The changes from 1890 to 1906 are as follows: 6 states—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New Jersey, Michigan, and Wisconsin—formerly showing a majority for Protestant bodies, are now in the Roman Catholic column; 1 state—Minnesota—formerly Roman Catholic, is now Protestant; 2 states—Colorado and Wyoming—which showed a Roman Catholic majority in 1890, now show Roman Catholic pluralities; 1 state—Connecticut—has changed its Roman Catholic plurality to a majority; and 1 state—Idaho—which in 1890 showed a majority for the Latter-day Saints, now shows a plurality for that body. In the three changes from majorities to pluralities the principal gain was reported for the Protestant bodies in Colorado and Idaho, and for the Latter-day Saints in Wyoming.

In addition to the foregoing, there have been other notable changes in many states, although not sufficient to call for a different classification. Thus in Pennsylvania the percentage of communicants or members in Protestant bodies in 1890 was 66.8, and in 1906 it was only 57.7, nearly all the difference going to the Roman Catholic Church. Iowa, on the other hand, shows an increase in the percentage of Protestant membership, from 68.6 per cent in 1890 to 72.2 per cent in 1906.

A comparison of the percentages for continental United States shows that the Protestant bodies have fallen off from 68 per cent of the total membership in 1890 to 61.6 per cent in 1906; that the Roman Catholic Church has increased from 30.3 per cent in 1890 to 36.7 per cent in 1906; while the Latter-day Saints maintain the same proportion, eight-tenths of 1 per cent.

Comparing the geographic divisions it appears that the greatest change has been in the North Atlantic division, where the proportion represented by the Protestant bodies decreased from 50.9 per cent to 41.7 per cent, and the Roman Catholic Church advanced from 47.6 per cent to 56.6 per cent. The South Atlantic division shows virtually the same percentages for both 1890 and 1906. The North Central and South Central divisions show practically the same changes as are shown for the country as a whole; the Protestant bodies losing in the one case 4.7 per cent and in the other 6.6 per cent, while the Roman Catholic Church shows a corresponding gain. In the Western division, on the other hand, the percentage for the Protestant bodies advanced from 30.2 in 1890 to 36.6 in 1906; the percentage for the Roman Catholic Church fell from 50.7 in 1890 to 49.2 in 1906; and the percentage for the Latter-day Saints fell from 17.5 in 1890 to 12.1 in 1906.

In the North Atlantic division the 41.7 per cent of the communicants or members shown for the Protestant bodies is made up as follows: Methodist bodies, 9.3 per cent; Presbyterian bodies, 6 per cent; Baptist bodies, 5.5 per cent; Lutheran bodies, 5.1 per cent; Protestant Episcopal Church, 4.5 per cent; and Congregationalists, 3.3 per cent. As compared with the figures for 1890, all share in the general falling off, although this is most marked in the Methodist bodies, which report only 9.3 per cent of all communicants in 1906, as compared with 12.5 per cent in 1890.

In the South Atlantic and South Central divisions the Baptist bodies lead, and their percentage of the total church membership shows an increase over 1890 of 4.5 in the South Atlantic states and of six-tenths of 1 in the South Central. The percentage for the Methodist bodies shows a decrease in each division—6.4 in the South Atlantic states and 7.8 in the South Central.

In the North Central division the 62.1 per cent of the total members shown for the Protestant bodies is made up as follows: Methodist bodies, 15.7 per cent; Lutheran bodies, 13.2 per cent; Baptist bodies, 7.2 per cent; Disciples or Christians, 5.8 per cent; Presbyterian bodies, 5.7 per cent; and Congregationalists, 2.6 per cent. As compared with 1890, the percentage for the Lutheran bodies shows an increase of 1.4, and that for the Disciples or Christians an increase of four-tenths of 1; while the percentages for the other bodies show a decrease.

In the Western division the general increase in Protestant membership from 30.2 per cent in 1890 to 36.6 per cent in 1906 is shared by most of the bodies. For 1906 the Methodist bodies report 10.1 per cent; Presbyterian bodies, 6 per cent; Baptist bodies, 4.2 per cent; Disciples or Christians, 3.4 per cent; Congregationalists, 3.1 per cent; and the Protestant Episcopal Church, 2.9 per cent.

The Roman Catholic Church reports 56.6 per cent of all the members in the North Atlantic division; 49.2 per cent in the Western; 36.9 per cent in the North Central; 19.4 per cent in the South Central; and 7.9 per cent in the South Atlantic. As compared with the report for 1890, the percentage that the Roman Catholic membership represents of the total membership shows an increase of 9 in the North Atlantic division; 4.7 in the North Central; 6.7 in the South Central; two-tenths of 1 in the South Atlantic; and a loss of 1.5 in the Western.

The Latter-day Saints, while showing a considerable increase in members over 1890 (90,522), retain the same percentage of the entire membership, but in the Western division, where they are strongest, they have fallen from 17.5 per cent to 12.1 per cent of the total membership.

These general statements support what has already been said under the head of communicants or members (see page 28), that the change in the relative strength of the religious bodies is due primarily to the influence of immigration. Where immigration has been inconsiderable, as in the South Atlantic division, there have been no material changes in the relative strength of the different bodies.

The following tabular statement for 1906 shows for each state and territory the 5 leading families or separate denominations arranged in the order of their rank, together with the proportion which their membership bears to the total church membership reported in each case:

It is to be observed from the foregoing statement that in most cases the 5 leading families or separate denominations listed contain at least three-fourths of the total church membership in 1906 and that in a few instances the proportion thus represented falls but little short of the entire membership reported, as, for example, in New Mexico and Mississippi, due in the first case to the predominance of members of the Roman Catholic Church and in the latter case to the large proportion represented by members of the Baptist and Methodist bodies.

The 5 states containing the largest proportions of the members reported for each principal family or separate denomination in 1906 are given in the order of their rank in the following tabular statement:

As indicated by the foregoing statement, the 5 leading states shown for the Protestant bodies, taken as a whole, contained only a little more than three-tenths (30.9 per cent) of all the members so included for 1906, whereas the 5 states shown for the Roman Catholic Church contained fully one-half (50.2 per cent) of all the members reported for that denomination, and those shown for the Latter-day Saints four-fifths (80.3 per cent) of all their reported membership.

In the case of all but 2 of the Protestant families and denominations represented, the 5 leading states contained either very nearly or more than one-half of their reported membership, the percentages ranging from 46.8 for the Presbyterian bodies to as high as 81.8 for the Reformed bodies. The 5 states listed for the Baptist bodies contained, on the other hand, only two-fifths (40 per cent) of the membership reported by the constituent denominations, and, similarly, the 5 states listed for the Methodist bodies contained less than three-tenths (29.6 per cent) of their reported membership. For each of these 2 families more than 5,000,000 members were reported in 1906, but this membership was very widely scattered over the country. As shown by the table on page 46, there were in 1906 over 100,000 members of Baptist bodies in each of 15 states, and, similarly, of Methodist bodies in each of 22 states.

The membership of Baptist bodies is especially large in the Southern states, and the 5 leading states in point of membership, as before stated, are all Southern states. For 1 of them (Georgia) there were reported very nearly 600,000 members, and for each of the other 4 states, between 400,000 and 500,000 members; for each of 3 other states, also, there were reported between 300,000 and 400,000 members; for each of 2 other states, between 200,000 and 300,000 members; and for 5 states, between 100,000 and 200,000 members.

Of the 5 leading states shown for the Methodist bodies, however, the first, second, and fifth were Northern states and the third and fourth Southern states. For each of the first 2 states (Pennsylvania and Ohio) there were reported somewhat more than 350,000 members, and for each of the remaining 3 states, between 300,000 and 350,000 members; but besides these states there were 9 other states for each of which between 200,000 and 300,000 members were reported, and 8 other states for each of which between 100,000 and 200,000 members were reported.

The membership of the Roman Catholic Church, on the other hand, although also widely distributed among the states and territories, is more nearly concentrated in the larger and more thickly settled states of the North and East. There are 23 states for each of which there were reported in 1906 over 100,000 members of the Roman Catholic Church, but the 5 leading states, as before stated, contained fully one-half of its entire reported membership. Considerably more than 2,000,000 members were shown for New York, more than 1,000,000 members each for Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, very nearly 1,000,000 members for Illinois, and more than 500,000 members for Ohio; and in addition to these states, a little more than 500,000 members were reported for 1 other state (Wisconsin); between 400,000 and 500,000 members for each of 3 states; between 300,000 and 400,000 members for each of 4 states; between 200,000 and 300,000 members for each of 2 states; and between 100,000 and 200,000 members for each of 8 states.

RELATION OF CHURCH MEMBERSHIP TO POPULATION.

Statistics showing the relation between the church membership of the different states and territories and the total population possess a certain amount of interest, although too much importance should not be attached to them, owing to the fact that the percentage of the population which is presumably barred from membership by reason of childhood or youth, varies considerably in the different states, as does also the number of those, already referred to, affiliated with churches but not registered as members. The following table shows, for each state and territory, in 1890 and 1906, respectively, the proportion of the total population reported as church members, classified according to membership in Protestant bodies, the Roman Catholic Church, or other bodies. The distribution of the population of continental United States according to church membership is also given for 1890 and 1906, respectively, in Diagram 3, and a similar distribution of the population of each state or territory, for 1906 only, in Diagram 4.

DIAGRAM 3.—Proportion of the population reported as Protestant, Roman Catholic, and "all other" church members, and proportion not reported as church members, for continental United States: 1890 and 1906.

[Note.—The designation "not church members" represents the difference between the number reported as communicants or members and the total population; it embraces, therefore, children too young to become church members, as well as that portion of the population which is eligible to church membership, although not affiliated with any religious denomination.]

Of the total estimated population of continental United States in 1906, 39.1 per cent, or not quite two-fifths, were reported as church members. The corresponding percentage for 1890 was 32.7, or somewhat less than one-third, so that the proportion of the population included within the churches was larger by 6.4 per cent in 1906 than at the time of the earlier census. The relative gain in church members in 1906 as compared with 1890, as represented by the difference (6.4) between the percentages shown for the two years, is divided among the three classes of members as follows: Protestant bodies, 1.8; Roman Catholic Church, 4.4; "all other bodies," one-tenth of 1 per cent.

The percentage of total population reported as church members varied considerably in the different states, ranging for 1906 from 18.2 in Oklahoma to 63.3 in New Mexico. The low percentage in Oklahoma is probably partly due to the fact that this state is of comparatively recent settlement, while the high percentage for New Mexico results from the fact that the majority of the population is affiliated with the Roman Catholic Church, which reports as communicants a larger proportion of those affiliated with it than do most Protestant bodies.

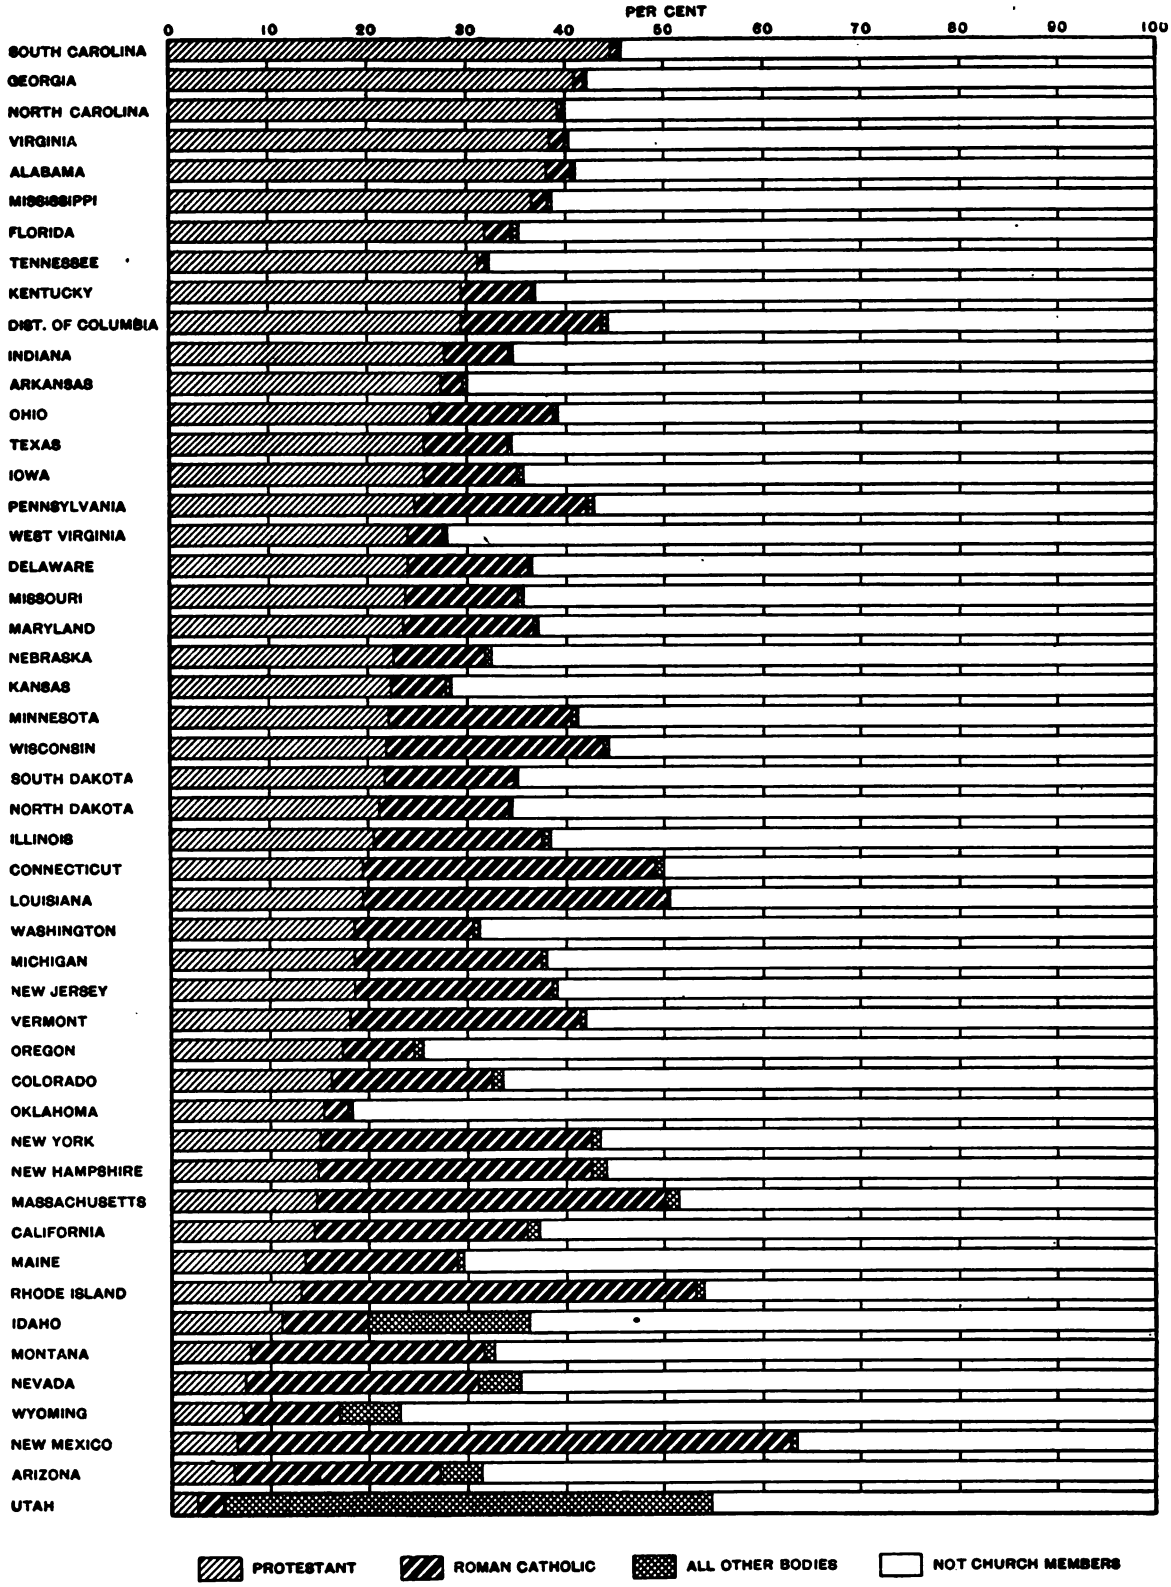
There were, in 1906, 6 states and territories in which at least 50 per cent of the population were church members, and 12 others in which between 40 and 50 per cent of the population were church members. The following statement shows these states and territories arranged according to the percentage which church members represent of the total population, together with the percentage of the total population reported for each of the three main denominational groupings:

STATE OR TERRITORY.	PERCENTAGE OF TOTAL POPULATION REPRESENTED IN 1906 BY MEMBERS OF—
	All religious bodies.	Protestant bodies.	Roman Catholic Church.	All other bodies.
New Mexico	63.3	6.7	56.2	0.4
Utah	54.6	2.6	2.6	49.4
Rhode Island	54.0	13.1	40.0	0.9
Massachusetts	51.3	14.8	35.5	1.1
Louisiana	50.6	19.4	31.0	0.1
Connecticut	50.0	19.5	29.8	0.7
South Carolina	45.8	45.0	0.7	0.1
District of Columbia	44.4	29.7	14.2	0.5
Wisconsin	44.3	21.7	22.3	0.2
New Hampshire	44.0	14.9	27.7	1.4
New York	43.7	15.0	27.8	0.8
Pennsylvania	43.0	24.8	17.5	0.7
Georgia	42.1	41.2	0.8	0.1
Vermont	42.0	18.2	23.5	0.3
Minnesota	41.2	22.2	18.7	0.3
Alabama	40.8	38.5	2.1	0.2
Virginia	40.2	38.6	1.5	0.1
North Carolina	40.0	39.8	0.2	0.1

It will be observed that in 12 out of the 18 states shown in the statement at least 10 per cent of the total population were communicants of the Roman Catholic Church, the proportion rising to over 56 per cent in New Mexico and exceeding 25 per cent in 6 other states. In general, the table shows that states having a relatively large Roman Catholic population will as a rule show a higher percentage of church members than states in which this church has a relatively small representation. This of course merely reflects the fact, already alluded to, that in the case of the Roman Catholic Church the communicants reported represent a much larger proportion of the total population affiliated with the church in question than is the case with respect to Protestant bodies, so that where those of Catholic affiliation represent a large proportion of the total population, the proportion reported as church members will consequently be relatively large.

DIAGRAM 4.—PROPORTION OF THE POPULATION REPORTED AS PROTESTANT, ROMAN CATHOLIC, AND "ALL OTHER" CHURCH MEMBERS, AND PROPORTION NOT REPORTED AS CHURCH MEMBERS, FOR EACH STATE AND TERRITORY: 1906.

[Note.—The designation "not church members" represents the difference between the number reported as communicants or members and the total population; it embraces, therefore, children too young to become church members, as well as that portion of the population which is eligible to church membership, although not affiliated with any religious denomination.]



Referring to the table on page 58 it will be seen that the proportion of the total population represented in the membership of Protestant churches varies much less widely for the different states than does the corresponding proportion for communicants of the Roman Catholic Church. The membership of Protestant bodies is least important relatively in Utah, where it represents only 2.6 per cent of the total population, and most important in South Carolina, where it represents 45 per cent of the total population. The corresponding percentages for the Roman Catholic Church, on the other hand, vary from two-tenths of 1 per cent in North Carolina to 56.2 per cent in New Mexico, showing a much wider range of variation than was shown for Protestant bodies, and indicating a much more uneven distribution of the members of this communion.

It appears, in general, as already indicated, that communicants of the Roman Catholic Church are most numerous relatively in the states into which there is a large influx resulting from immigration, and in the states and territories of the Southwest adjoining the Catholic country of Mexico, and least numerous in the Southern states, into which immigration has so far been relatively slight.

The large percentage of the population of Utah shown in the table under the heading "all other" results from the preponderance of the Latter-day Saints in that state.

It also should be stated here that the percentages given in the last two columns of the table represent, for each state and territory in 1890 and 1906, respectively, simply the difference between the number of communicants or members reported and the total population, and that they cover, therefore, children and infants too young to become church members as well as that portion of the population which is eligible to church membership, although not affiliated with any religious denomination.

The table on page 58 also shows that in 13 states the proportion of the total population reported as being communicants or members of religious organizations was greater by at least 10 per cent in 1906 than in 1890. The following statement shows for each of these states the relative gain (or loss) in the percentage for 1906 over that for 1890 of the total population represented by members of all religious organizations, and by members of Protestant bodies, the Roman Catholic Church, and all other religious bodies, respectively:

Of the following tabular statements, one presents the 10 states showing the largest relative gains in the percentage for 1906 over that for 1890 of the total population represented by communicants of Protestant bodies and of the Roman Catholic Church, respectively, while the other makes a corresponding presentation for the states showing relative losses:

From a study of the preceding figures it appears that the largest gains in the proportion of the total population represented by church members have been for the most part in those states which are most affected by immigration, and that they are more or less generally coincident with the growth of the Roman Catholic Church. It is to be noted, however, that in New Mexico, where communicants of the Roman Catholic Church represented more than one-half the total population in 1906, there has been a relative loss in the percentage of the total population reported as members of that denomination, from 62.7 in 1890 to 56.2 in 1906. This is probably to some extent due to the fact that there has been a large influx of new settlers into this territory since 1890, which has reduced not only the proportion of the total population having Catholic affiliation, as just stated, but also the proportion reported as having any church connection, in the latter case from 66 in 1890 to 63.3 in 1906. A similar instance is shown for Utah, where the percentage representing "all others" (comprising Latter-day Saints largely) has decreased from 56.2 in 1890 to 49.4 in 1906 and, as a result, that representing all church members, from 60.8 in 1890 to 54.6 in 1906.

The following table and Diagram 5 show, by states and territories, the number of communicants per 1,000 population in 1906 for each of the 12 principal families and separate denominations—those for which 250,000 members or more were reported, and Diagram 6 shows their proportional strength:

[1] Less than 1 per 1,000 of population. [2] Oklahoma and Indian Territory combined [3] Special census, 1907.

According to the foregoing table, the Roman Catholic Church had in 1906 at least 100 communicants per 1,000 population in 28 states, the Baptist bodies in 13 states, the Methodist bodies in 12 states, the Lutheran bodies in 3 states, and the Latter-day Saints in 2 states.

Considering the states having at least 100 communicants per 1,000 population, it appears that, for the Roman Catholic Church, the range is from 562 for New Mexico to 114 for Missouri. For Rhode Island, the proportion, although not so high as for New Mexico, is very large, or 400 per 1,000 population, and for 2 other states—Massachusetts and Louisiana—it is between 300 and 400.

For the Baptist bodies the range in the 13 states under consideration is very much narrower—from 244 for Georgia to 114 for Texas, 5 states showing a proportion of over 200 members, and 8 states between 100 and 200 members in every 1,000 population.

For the Methodist bodies there is no state for which the proportion of members per 1,000 population is in excess of 200, the highest shown for any of the 12 states considered being 171 for South Carolina, and the lowest 100 for Arkansas.

The Lutheran bodies have 132 members per 1,000 population in Minnesota, 129 in North Dakota, and 126 in Wisconsin; and, similarly, the Latter-day Saints have 479 in Utah and 158 in Idaho.

SUMMARY FOR COUNTIES.

The statistics of communicants or members for each state and territory by counties are given in Table 4 of the general tables, together with the total population according to the census of 1900, the total membership for Protestant bodies, and the membership for a selected list of Protestant denominations, for the Roman Catholic Church, Jewish congregations, etc. The list varies with the states, the design being to present in each case those bodies which according to the reports sent in by the individual organizations are most strongly represented in the particular state. In the few cases where denominations have been consolidated, it is indicated either in the boxhead or in footnotes.

Distribution of communicants or members.—A study of Table 4 of the general tables shows that out of over 2,900 counties in continental United States, only 9 make no report of communicants or members. Of these, 1 is in California, in the heart of the Sierras; and the other 8 in western Texas, where there are few facilities for intercommunication. Seven of these counties had, in 1900, a population, respectively, of from 4 to 87, and the eighth, on the Mexican border, with a population of 4,760, is probably, like the adjoining counties, peopled by Spanish-speaking Roman Catholics, although no returns were received from the priests.

The distribution of communicants within the states naturally corresponds very closely to the distribution of population, the same general proportion being usually found in the respective counties as in the states at large. In general, those counties which report a smaller number of communicants or members in proportion to the population are isolated and have poor facilities for intercourse. Thus the membership in Forest and Pike counties in Pennsylvania, which are practically without railroad communication, represents but 16 per cent of their total population, although the general percentage for the state is 47.2. In North Carolina, while the general percentage for the state is 43.5, Clay and Graham counties in the mountain section of the western part of the state, with no facilities for intercommunication, show percentages of 33.7 and 26.2. In Illinois only 2 counties report less than 2,000 members—Hardin and Putnam; the former has little railroad communication, the latter is very small; and the proportion of membership to the population is 25.4 and 26.3, against 43.1 for the state as a whole.

Distribution of denominations.—The Methodist bodies are the most widely distributed. In 29 states communicants of either the Methodist Episcopal Church or the Methodist Episcopal Church South, are to be found in every county, and in over 2,900 counties in continental United States, there are less than 100 in which at least one of these bodies is not represented. Next in order come the Baptist bodies, members of one or more of the three Baptist conventions being found in every county in 20 states, and in the great majority of the counties of continental United States. The Presbyterians are likewise very widely represented, while the Roman Catholics are represented in every county in 12 states.

Certain denominations especially prominent in particular states are also, as a rule, well distributed over those states. Thus the Disciples of Christ who are strong in Indiana, reporting 108,188 members, are found in every county in the state, and are well distributed, only 5 counties reporting over 3,000, while 53 out of the 92 counties in the state have less than 1,000 members each. Similar conditions exist among the United Brethren, the Congregationalists, the Protestant Episcopal Church, and others. Among the Lutherans there is more of a tendency to concentrate in particular counties, except in the case of the Synodical Conference, whose membership is distributed quite evenly over the sections of the states where it is strong.

So far as concerns the number of denominations represented in particular counties, the largest numbers are naturally found in those counties containing large cities. There are comparatively few counties in which every denomination represented in the state has members, and those are generally in the more densely populated states.

SUMMARY OF STATISTICS FOR THE PRINCIPAL CITIES.

The statistics of the religious bodies for 1906 for the cities having a population of 25,000 and over in 1900 are presented in detail in Tables 5, 6, and 7 of the general tables. Table 5 (page 374) gives, for each city, a summary of the statistics for all denominations together; Table 6 (page 380) gives the estimated population of the cities for 1906, and the number of communicants or members by denominations in detail; and Table 7 (page 408) presents, for each city, a summary of the statistics by selected denominations.

In these general tables and in the following textual discussion the 160 principal cities—those having 25,000 inhabitants or more in 1900—are divided into four classes according to population, as follows: 11 cities of the first class—those having over 300,000 inhabitants; 27 cities of the second class—those having from 100,000 to 300,000 inhabitants; 40 cities of the third class—those having from 50,000 to 100,000 inhabitants; and 82 cities of the fourth class—those having from 25,000 to 50,000 inhabitants.

It should be noted that the estimated population for 1906 as given in the various tables and diagrams does not include Los Angeles and San Francisco, California.[1]

It should also be noted that the figures given in the various tables for Rochester, N. Y., do not include the statistics of the Roman Catholic Church, since these were not furnished separately by cities for the diocese of Rochester. For the same reason the figures for the cities of Auburn and Elmira, N. Y., which belong to this diocese, are similarly affected. For the diocese of Cleveland, Ohio, a part only of the statistics of the Roman Catholic Church were furnished separately by cities, and hence in the figures given for the city of Cleveland and for the cities of Canton, Toledo, and Youngstown, which belong to this diocese, only a part of the statistics of this body are included. No statistics for this body are given for Jackson, Mich., as only a part of the statistics for the diocese of Detroit, to which Jackson belongs, were furnished separately by cities. These facts affect somewhat not only the figures for the cities named, but also the general totals for cities, and the totals for the various classes of cities to which those in question belong.

[1] No estimates were made for Los Angeles in compliance with the request of the city officials, and none for San Francisco on account of the great loss occasioned by the earthquake of April 18, 1906.

The proportion of organizations reporting on the various items of inquiry as compared with the reports for the whole country is shown by classes of cities in the following table:

From this table it appears that the reports from the principal cities were in general not as complete as from the country as a whole. The percentages of organizations which furnished figures for communicants or members, sex of members, and value of church property, were noticeably smaller, but in regard to other items the reports from the cities were more complete than those from the country as a whole. Among the different classes of cities those of the first class in general furnished the smallest percentages of organizations reporting. The percentage of organizations reporting debt on church property was considerably larger for the cities, especially for those of the first class, but this does not indicate fuller reports, inasmuch as organizations having no debt evidently made no mention of the fact, but simply that a larger proportion of city than country organizations had such debts.

The following table shows, for the different classes of cities, the number and per cent distribution of population, organizations, and communicants or members in 1890 and 1906:

In 1906 the estimated population of the 160 principal cities (exclusive of Los Angeles and San Francisco) was 22,425,548, or 26.6 per cent of the total estimated population of continental United States; while they reported 17,906 religious organizations, or 8.4 per cent of the total number, and 10,511,178 communicants or members, or 31.9 per cent of the total number. There was thus, in 1906, in the principal cities, 1 organization to every 1,252 of the population, and in cities of the first class, 1 to every 1,700 of the population; while for the country as a whole the proportion was 1 to every 397 of the population. Of the 22,425,548 population in the principal cities, 10,511,178, or 46.9 per cent, were reported as communicants or members, while the percentage for the country as a whole is only 39.1. Of the different classes of cities, the third shows the highest ratio of communicants to population, 49.7 per cent, and is followed by the fourth with 48.4 per cent.

As compared with 1890, it appears that for the principal cities the rate of increase in the number of organizations and in number of communicants or members is much greater than the rate of increase in population, but for the area outside these cities, the rate of increase in the number of organizations is approximately the same as the rate of increase in population, and in number of communicants or members it is considerably greater. Among the different classes of cities the first class shows the most notable increase, more than doubling the number of organizations and of communicants; the third and fourth classes follow closely; while the second has a much lower rate, and outside of the principal cities the rate of increase was even less.

The following table shows, for the different classes of cities, the number of communicants or members in comparison with the total population in 1890 and 1906:

The number of communicants or members in each 1,000 of population for 1906 is, for the principal cities, 469; for the whole country, 391; and for the sections outside of the principal cities, 363. The ratio of communicants to population is thus considerably greater for the principal cities than for the country as a whole. Comparing the different classes of cities it appears that the ratios for cities of the first and second classes are considerably smaller than for the other two classes, due probably in part to the omission of the statistics of the Roman Catholic Church in certain cities, as already indicated.

As compared with the report for 1890, the table shows a gain of 90 communicants in each 1,000 of population for the principal cities, and of 51 outside of the principal cities, the gain in the proportion of communicants to population thus being far greater in the principal cities than outside of these cities, or than in the country as a whole. Among the different classes of cities, the largest gain—106 communicants per 1,000 population—is found in cities of the third class, while the smallest gain appears in those of the first class, and the next smallest in those of the second class, these smaller gains being due, in part, as already stated, to incomplete statistics for the Roman Catholic Church.

The high ratios of communicants or members to population shown for the principal cities, as compared with the area outside these cities, are due chiefly to the greater strength of the Roman Catholic Church in the cities; and the greater proportionate increase in communicants or members between 1890 and 1906 shown for these cities is also largely due to the same cause. The fact that in 1906 the number of principal cities was larger by 36 than in 1890, and that in addition, during the interval between 1890 and 1906, a considerable territory had been annexed to various cities, augments to a noticeable extent the rates of increase for the principal cities and diminishes the rates of increase for the area outside these cities. Of course this last fact does not materially affect the changes between 1890 and 1906 in the ratios of communicants or members to population.

The following table shows, for the different classes of cities, the sex distribution of communicants or members in 1906:

There were in continental United States 4,082,039, or 32 per cent, more female than male members, while in the principal cities the excess of female members was proportionately less, being 960,526, or 23.5 per cent. Comparing the different classes of cities, it appears that in those of the first class the excess of female members over male members was only 18 per cent; in the second class, 28.9 per cent; in the third class, 25.8 per cent; in the fourth class, 31.1 per cent; and outside of these cities, 35.9 per cent. The greater proportion of males in the principal cities is largely due to the greater proportionate strength of the Roman Catholic Church in these cities.

The following table shows, for the different classes of cities, the distribution of church edifices in 1890 and 1906, and a similar distribution for 1906 only, of halls, etc., and the seating capacity of church edifices:

Outside of principal cities	176,278	91.4	132,765	93.2	12,879	87.1	50,284,977	85.9

Comparing the preceding table with the tables on page 70 it appears that, exclusive of Los Angeles and San Francisco, there was, in 1906, in the principal cities, 1 church edifice to every 1,358 of the population, while for the whole country the proportion was 1 to every 437. Comparing the different classes, the cities of the first class show 1 for every 1,902 of the population; of the second class 1 for every 1,279; of the third class 1 for every 1,017; and of the fourth class 1 for every 884. Thus it appears that the smaller cities provide more church edifices in proportion to their population than do the larger cities.

It appears also that the seating capacity reported for the principal cities for 1906 represented 36.8 per cent of their population, while for the whole country it represented 69.5 per cent. Among the different classes of cities, the smallest percentage under this head, 28.9, was for cities of the first class, and the largest, 51 per cent, for those of the fourth class. The increase between 1890 and 1906 in the number of church edifices in the principal cities was 69.9 per cent, as compared with 74.8 per cent in the number of organizations and 98.2 per cent in communicants or members.

In this connection it should be remembered, as already noted (page 71), that the relation of the seating capacity of church edifices to church membership and to the population, especially in large cities, is materially affected by the high average membership in the Roman Catholic Church, and the fact that in the cities are congregated the great majority of those who are not identified in any way with religious organizations. These two facts account in great measure for the low percentages presented in the table.

The following table shows, for the different classes of cities, the value of church property in 1890 and 1906, and the debt on church property and value of parsonages, in 1906 only:

It appears that although they had less than 9 per cent of the organizations and less than 32 per cent of the communicants, the principal cities reported nearly one-half the entire amount of church property, considerably more than one-half the debt on church property, and about one-third the value of parsonages. Moreover, under each head the cities of the first class reported much the largest percentages. The explanation as to the value of church property and the debt on church property is found, undoubtedly, in the higher value of land in the cities, especially those of the first class, and in the more elaborate church edifices, while the small proportion of the value of parsonages is explained probably by the greater need of such provision outside of the cities. As compared with 1890, the increase of church property in the principal cities was 95.5 per cent, as compared with 85.1 per cent for the country as a whole. In the different classes of cities the increase ranges from 131.7 per cent for cities of the first class to 79.2 per cent for those of the fourth class, with the exception of those of the second class, for which it was only 39 per cent. The rate of increase in the value of church property outside of the principal cities was 76.2 per cent.

The first table on page 73 shows, for the different classes of cities, the Sunday schools conducted by church organizations in 1906.

From this table it appears that while the proportion of Sunday schools in these cities is small, a much larger proportion of officers and teachers and a still larger proportion of scholars are found in them. Comparing these figures with the population, it appears that in the principal cities there was 1 Sunday school to every 1,276 of the population, as compared with 1 to every 473 for the whole country. In the cities of the first class, there was 1 school for every 1,811 of the population, while for the area outside of the principal cities there was 1 for every 385. The Sunday school scholars represented 16.1 per cent of the population in the principal cities, as compared with 17.4 per cent for the country as a whole. Of the different classes of cities, the smallest proportion is shown for the first class, 13.8 per cent, while outside of the principal cities it is 17.9 per cent. Comparing the number of schools with the number of communicants or members, it appears that in the principal cities there was 1 school to every 598 communicants, and in the cities of the first class, 1 to every 823 communicants, while for the country as a whole the ratio is 1 to every 185 communicants.

The average number of communicants or members reported by the organizations throughout the country was 157, while the average number reported by the organizations in the principal cities was 608. Of the different classes of cities, the first class shows an average of 829, and the others follow with steadily decreasing numbers. For the country as a whole the average seating capacity per organization reporting was 325, and for the principal cities, 569. The cities of the first class led with 631, while the figures for the second and third classes were very nearly alike, 549 and 548. Outside the principal cities the average was 304.

The average value of church property per organization reporting was $6,756 for the country as a whole, and for the principal cities, $40,604. The cities of the first class reported an average of $65,796, and the other classes show steadily diminishing figures as in the case of average membership per organization. In respect to debt on church property, the situation is similar. The average debt per organization reporting is, for the entire country, $3,214; for the principal cities, $9,357; and for the cities of the first class, $14,422, with the other classes of cities following in order.

The following table and the table on page 76 give for the principal families and separate denominations the total communicants or members, value of church property, and debt on church property, as reported for the different classes of cities and for the area outside of the principal cities, with the averages under each head for the organizations reporting.

Of the aggregate number of communicants reported for Protestant bodies, 20,287,742, the preceding table shows that 1,478,145, or 7.3 per cent, were in cities of the first class; 4.7 per cent in cities of the second class; and 7.4 per cent in cities of the third and fourth classes combined, while 80.6 per cent were outside of the principal cities. The proportion is considerably less for each class of cities than that for all denominations taken together, while for the area outside of the principal cities it is much greater.

Of the aggregate number of communicants reported by the Roman Catholic Church, 3,375,453, or 27.9 per cent, were in cities of the first class; 1,361,132, or 11.3 per cent, in cities of the second class; 1,570,944, or 13 per cent, in cities of the third and fourth classes combined; and 5,771,613, or 47.8 per cent, outside of the principal cities. It thus appears that the number of members of the Roman Catholic Church reported in cities of the first class was considerably more than double the number reported by all the Protestant bodies, while outside of the principal cities the number reported by the Roman Catholic Church was only a little over one-third the number reported by all the Protestant bodies. In this connection it should be remembered that, as stated on page 25, the numerical strength of the Protestant bodies, as compared with the Roman Catholic Church, is greatly understated.

Of the Protestant bodies shown in the table, only two report a majority of their membership in the principal cities, namely, the Church of Christ, Scientist, 82.6 per cent, and the Protestant Episcopal Church, 51.2 per cent; while of the membership of the Jewish congregations, 88.7 per cent are in the principal cities, and of the Eastern Orthodox Churches, 70.7 per cent. The religious bodies showing the largest percentages of members outside of the principal cities are: The Mennonite bodies, 97.9 per cent; the Christians (Christian Connection), 96.7 per cent; the Dunkers or German Baptist Brethren, 93.9 per cent; the United Brethren bodies, 91.7 per cent; the Disciples or Christians, 88.6 per cent; the Friends, 88.5 per cent; the Baptist bodies, 87.9 per cent; the Latter-day Saints, 86.9 per cent; and the Methodist bodies, 85.9 per cent.

Of the total number of communicants or members reported for the principal cities by all denominations, 6,307,529, or 60 per cent, belonged to the Roman Catholic Church, and 3,935,341, or 37.4 per cent, to Protestant bodies. Of the total number reported by Protestant bodies for these cities, 2,524,152, or 64.1 per cent, were returned by four denominational families, the Methodist, Baptist, Lutheran, and Presbyterian, in the order named.

The average number of communicants or members per organization reporting ranged, for Protestant bodies, from 332 for cities of the first class to 90 for the area outside of the principal cities; for the Roman Catholic Church, from 3,681 for cities of the first class to 558 for the area outside of the principal cities; and for the Eastern Orthodox Churches, from 1,770 for cities of the first class to 146 for the area outside of the principal cities. For the Church of Christ, Scientist, the number ranged from 1,688 for cities of the first class to 33 for the area outside of the principal cities. Of the Protestant bodies, the Church of Christ, Scientist, shows the largest average membership per organization for cities of the first class, and is followed by the German Evangelical Synod of North America. The latter body shows the largest average membership among Protestant bodies in the cities of the second class and in the cities of the third and fourth classes combined. The bodies showing the largest averages outside of the principal cities are the Roman Catholic Church, 558; Latter-day Saints, 208; German Evangelical Synod of North America, 172; Eastern Orthodox Churches, 146; Reformed bodies, 144; and Lutheran bodies, 141. In a number of religious bodies, notably the Christians (Christian Connection), Disciples or Christians, German Evangelical Synod, United Brethren bodies, and Latter-day Saints, larger averages are shown for either the second class, or the third and fourth classes combined, than for the first class. With the exception of four bodies—Dunkers or German Baptist Brethren, Friends, Mennonite bodies, and Latter-day Saints—the average number of communicants or members per organization is lower outside of the principal cities than in any of the different classes of cities.

The number of communicants or members given in the report for 1890 for cities of 25,000 inhabitants and over was 5,302,018; of these the Protestant bodies were credited with 2,137,748, or 40.3 per cent, and the Roman Catholic Church, with 3,010,646, or 56.8 per cent. Of the total number reported by Protestant bodies at that time, the four leading families—the Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, and Lutheran, in the order named—were credited with 1,403,699, or 65.7 per cent. In 1906 the same families led, but the Lutheran and Presbyterian bodies had changed places.

Comparison with the report for 1890 shows that in general there has been an increase in the proportion of communicants or members in the principal cities as compared with those outside of these cities. In 1906 the percentage of the total number of communicants in these cities, for all denominations, was 31.9, as compared with 25.7 in 1890. The percentages for the two periods, as shown by some of the principal families and separate denominations, are as follows: Adventist bodies, 19.5 per cent in 1906 as compared with 14 in 1890; Baptist bodies, 12.1 per cent as compared with 9.4; Congregationalists, 31.5 per cent as compared with 25.6; Lutheran bodies, 24.7 per cent as compared with 21.6; Methodist bodies, 14.1 per cent as compared with 10.8; Presbyterian bodies, 27.5 per cent as compared with 22.9; Reformed bodies, 30.7 per cent as compared with 22.7; the Protestant Episcopal Church, 51.2 per cent as compared with 48; and the Roman Catholic Church, 52.2 per cent as compared with 48.2.

Of the total value of church property in the principal cities, $415,169,061, or 67.7 per cent, was reported by Protestant bodies, and $173,761,020, or 28.4 per cent, by the Roman Catholic Church. Of the total reported by Protestant bodies for these cities, $282,178,483, or 68 per cent, was reported by four of the bodies listed—the Protestant Episcopal Church and the Methodist, Presbyterian, and Baptist bodies—in the order named. The Protestant bodies, as a whole, reported 23.2 per cent of the total value of their church property in cities of the first class, 8.8 per cent in cities of the second class, 12.4 per cent in cities of the third and fourth classes combined, and 55.6 per cent outside of the principal cities. Among Protestant bodies reporting the largest percentage of their property in the principal cities are: The Church of Christ, Scientist, 86 per cent, 61.1 per cent being in cities of the first class; Independent churches, 67.6 per cent, 53.8 per cent being in cities of the first class; the Unitarians, 66.5 per cent, 41.9 per cent being in cities of the first class; and the Protestant Episcopal Church, 63.6 per cent, 40 per cent being in cities of the first class.

The Roman Catholic Church reported 59.4 per cent of the value of its church property as being in the principal cities, 36.5 per cent being in cities of the first class; the Jewish congregations, 92.2 per cent, 65.5 per cent being in cities of the first class; and the Eastern Orthodox Churches, 85.9 per cent, 46.3 per cent being in cities of the first class.

Among the religious bodies having an exceptionally large percentage of their church property outside of the principal cities were the Mennonite bodies, 94.6 per cent; the Dunkers or German Baptist Brethren, 85.4 per cent; the Christians (Christian Connection), 85.1 per cent; the United Brethren bodies, 85 per cent; and the Latter-day Saints 80.8 per cent.

The average value of church property per organization reporting corresponds in general with the grades of the cities, ranging, for all denominations, from $65,796 for cities of the first class to $25,407 for cities of the third and fourth classes combined. The average outside of the principal cities was $3,770. For Protestant bodies the average ranges from $53,612 for cities of the first class to $21,236 for cities of the third and fourth classes combined, and $3,227 outside of the principal cities, the average being considerably less in each instance than that for all denominations taken together. For the Roman Catholic Church the averages are $132,455 for cities of the first class, $65,052 for cities of the second class, $65,658 for cities of the third and fourth classes, and $14,045 for the area outside of the principal cities, each of these averages being more than twice the corresponding average for all denominations combined. The denomination showing the highest average value of church property per organization for cities of the first class is the Church of Christ, Scientist, while those next in order are the Roman Catholic Church and the Unitarians. The Roman Catholic Church leads in cities of the second class and in those of the third and fourth classes combined, and is followed by the Universalists in cities of the second class, and by the Unitarians in cities of the third and fourth classes. The Unitarians and the Roman Catholic Church report the highest average values outside of the principal cities. Among the bodies showing exceptionally low average values outside of the principal cities are the Adventist bodies, $1,280; the Baptist bodies, $1,838; the Christians (Christian Connection), $1,918; and the Independent churches, $1,937.

The total value of church property given in the report for 1890 for cities of over 25,000 inhabitants was $313,537,247; of this, $238,813,328, or 76.2 per cent, was returned by Protestant bodies, and $65,045,650, or 20.7 per cent, by the Roman Catholic Church. Of the total value returned by Protestant bodies, $170,072,381, or 71.2 per cent, was reported by the same four subclasses of Protestants which led in 1906, although in a somewhat different order: Protestant Episcopal Church, and the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Baptist bodies.

In general there has been an increase in the proportion of the value of church property in the principal cities as compared with that outside of these cities. In 1906 the percentage, for the principal cities, of the total value for all denominations was 48.7 per cent, as compared with 46.1 per cent in 1890. The percentages in these cities at the two periods, shown by some of the principal families and denominations, are as follows: Adventist bodies, 28.9 per cent in 1906, as compared with 24.7 in 1890; Baptist bodies, 37.9 per cent, as compared with 36.5; Congregationalists, 47.5 per cent, as compared with 41.6; Lutheran bodies, 42.8 per cent, as compared with 41.7; Methodist bodies, 32.6 per cent, as compared with 31.9; Presbyterian bodies, 49.8 per cent, as compared with 49.8; the Protestant Episcopal Church, 63.6 per cent, as compared with 62.3; and the Roman Catholic Church, 59.4 per cent, as compared with 55.1 in 1890.

It is noteworthy that of the total debt for cities of the first class more than one-half was reported by the Roman Catholic Church. Other families or separate denominations reporting exceptionally large amounts of debt for this class of cities are the Jewish congregations, $3,068,760, or 67.3 per cent of their total debt; the Methodist bodies, $2,785,782, or 22.7 per cent of their total debt; the Lutheran bodies, $2,749,814, or 35 per cent of their total debt; and the Baptist bodies, $2,647,519, or 31.8 per cent of their total debt. The highest figures reported for the area outside of the principal cities are: $16,066,508, by the Roman Catholic Church; $6,095,437, by Methodist bodies; $3,433,692, by Baptist bodies; $2,688,934, by Lutheran bodies; and $2,406,603, by Presbyterian bodies.

The average debt per organization reporting corresponds in general, as in the case of the value of church property, with the grade of the cities, ranging, for all denominations together, from $14,422 for cities of the first class to $5,451 for cities of the third and fourth classes combined, while for the area outside of the principal cities, it was only $1,447. For Protestant bodies, the averages range from $8,078 for cities of the first class to $3,438 for cities of the third and fourth classes combined, and $925 for the area outside of the principal cities, the average in each instance being much less than that for all denominations.

For the Roman Catholic Church the averages are $35,623 for cities of the first class, $24,340 for those of the second class, and $17,970 for those of the third and fourth classes combined, while the average for the area outside of the principal cities is $5,550. In four cases only the averages reported for cities of the second class are larger than those for the first class, namely, the Church of Christ, Scientist, $17,358 as compared with $6,050; the German Evangelical Synod of North America, $6,549 as compared with $5,854; the United Brethren bodies, $4,467 as compared with $2,427; and the Friends, $1,675 as compared with $950. The United Brethren bodies report a still higher average for cities of the third and fourth classes combined than for those of the first class, namely $2,712 as compared with $2,427. In no case is the average for the area outside of the principal cities larger than the average for any one of the several classes of cities.

The next table gives, for 1906, the number of communicants or members of the principal denominational families and separate denominations in the 38 cities having in 1900 a population of over 100,000, together with the percentage that the membership in each case constitutes of the total membership in the city.

As already shown, the total number of communicants or members in the principal cities in 1906 was 10,511,178. Of this number, 7,343,403, or 69.9 per cent, were reported by the 38 cities of over 100,000 population, and of these, 2,432,630, or 33.1 per cent, belonged to Protestant bodies, and 4,736,585, or 64.5 per cent, to the Roman Catholic Church, this denomination having in these 38 cities about three-fourths—75.1 per cent—of its entire membership in cities of over 25,000 inhabitants. As already stated, the statistics of the Roman Catholic Church for Rochester are not included. Of the total membership reported for cities of over 100,000 inhabitants, the Methodist bodies are credited with 6.1 per cent; the Baptist bodies, with 5.1 per cent; the Lutheran bodies, with 4.8 per cent; and the Presbyterian bodies, with 4.5 per cent, while other Protestant bodies showing low percentages are the United Brethren bodies, one-tenth of 1 per cent; the Disciples or Christians, nine-tenths of 1 per cent; the Reformed bodies, 1.1 per cent; the German Evangelical Synod of North America, 1.4 per cent; and the Congregationalists, 1.7 per cent. The Latter-day Saints had in these cities only 5,829 communicants, or one-tenth of 1 per cent of the total number reported for the cities in question, and "all other bodies" 168,359, or 2.3 per cent.

In 13 of the cities (including Rochester), as shown by the table, more than one-half of the communicants or members reported belonged to Protestant bodies, while in 23 the majority belonged to the Roman Catholic Church. Aside from Rochester, the cities showing the largest proportions of Protestant communicants are Memphis, 84.4 per cent; Toledo, 70 per cent; Washington, 66.9 per cent; Kansas City, Mo., 66.2 per cent; and Indianapolis, 62.1 per cent; while the cities showing the largest percentages of Roman Catholic communicants are Fall River, 86.5 per cent; San Francisco, 81.1 per cent; New Orleans, 79.7 per cent; New York, 76.9 per cent; and Providence, 76.5 per cent.

Naturally the city reporting the largest number of communicants or members is New York, with 1,838,482, or considerably more than twice the number reported by any other city; and of these 20.3 per cent were Protestants and 76.9 per cent Roman Catholics. The Protestant denominations having the largest number of members in this city are the Protestant Episcopal Church, 92,534, or 5 per cent of the total communicants or members in the city; the Methodist bodies, 57,021, or 3.1 per cent; the Presbyterian bodies, 51,547, or 2.8 per cent; and the Lutheran bodies, 51,285, or 2.8 per cent. The city which stands second in respect to the number of communicants or members reported is Chicago, with 833,441, and of these 28.5 per cent are Protestants and 68.2 per cent Roman Catholics. The leading Protestant bodies in Chicago are the Lutheran bodies, with 64,897 communicants, or 7.8 per cent of the total for the city; the Methodist bodies, with 34,034, or 4.1 per cent; the Presbyterian bodies, with 24,427, or 2.9 per cent; and the Baptist bodies, with 23,931, also 2.9 per cent.

[3] Statistics not reported separately by cities for Rochester diocese.
[4] Exclusive of statistics for Roman Catholic Church not reported separately by cities for Rochester diocese and parts of Cleveland and Detroit dioceses.

The third city in respect to the number of communicants or members reported is Philadelphia, with 558,866, and of these 45.6 per cent are Protestants and 51.8 per cent Roman Catholics. The leading Protestant bodies in Philadelphia are the Presbyterian bodies, with 57,874 communicants, or 10.4 per cent of the total for the city; the Methodist bodies, with 52,068, or 9.3 per cent; the Protestant Episcopal Church, with 46,644, or 8.3 per cent; and the Baptist bodies, with 44,430, or 8 per cent. The fourth city is Boston, with 376,728 communicants or members, and of this number 29.6 per cent are Protestants and 68.7 per cent Roman Catholics. The leading Protestant bodies are the Baptist bodies, with 17,349 communicants, or 4.6 per cent of the total; the Protestant Episcopal Church, 13,352, or 3.5 per cent; and the Congregationalists, 12,127, or 3.2 per cent. The city fifth in order is St. Louis, with 302,531 communicants or members, 29.5 per cent being Protestants and 69 per cent Roman Catholics. The Methodist bodies report 19,210 communicants, or 6.3 per cent of the total; the Lutheran bodies, 16,508, or 5.5 per cent; and the German Evangelical Synod of North America, 12,928, or 4.3 per cent.

In the percentage of communicants reported by Protestant bodies (not including "other Protestant bodies") in the 38 cities shown in the table, the Methodist bodies lead in 11 cities, namely, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Columbus, Denver, Fall River, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Mo., Los Angeles, St. Joseph, St. Louis, and Syracuse; the Lutheran bodies in 8, namely, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Jersey City, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Toledo; the Baptist bodies in 6, namely, Boston, Louisville, Memphis, New Orleans, Providence, and Washington; the Presbyterian bodies in 6, namely, Allegheny, Newark, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Rochester, and Scranton; the Congregationalists in 2, namely, New Haven and Worcester; the German Evangelical Synod of North America in 1, Buffalo; the Protestant Episcopal Church in 1, New York; and the Reformed bodies in 1, Paterson, N. J. In both Omaha and San Francisco the Methodist and Presbyterian bodies show the same percentage of communicants, which is in each case higher than that for any other Protestant body.

In regard to the absolute numerical strength of the leading Protestant bodies in the cities mentioned in the table, it appears that the Baptist bodies have their greatest strength in New York, Philadelphia, and Washington; the Congregationalists, in New York, Chicago, and Boston; the Disciples or Christians, in Indianapolis, Kansas City, Mo., and Chicago; the German Evangelical Synod of North America, in Chicago, Buffalo, and St. Louis; the Lutheran bodies, in Chicago, New York, and Milwaukee; the Methodist bodies, in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Chicago; the Presbyterian bodies, in Philadelphia, New York, and Pittsburg; the Protestant Episcopal Church, in New York, Philadelphia, and Chicago; the Reformed bodies, in New York and Philadelphia; and the United Brethren bodies, in Baltimore.

In the 5 leading cities the proportion of communicants to population is as follows: New York, 44.7 per cent; Chicago, 40.7 per cent; Philadelphia, 38.8 per cent; Boston, 62.6 per cent; and St. Louis, 46.6 per cent. In general, cities which have a relatively large Roman Catholic population show a higher percentage of church members than cities in which this body has a comparatively small representation. In Fall River, as shown by the table, 86.5 per cent of the total number of communicants reported are Roman Catholics, the church membership represents 67.8 per cent of the population, while in Memphis, where 84.4 per cent of the communicants reported belong to Protestant bodies, the church membership is only 30 per cent of the population.

The following diagrams illustrate the relative strength in membership of the principal families and separate denominations. Diagram 7 shows that strength in the different classes of cities; diagram 8 shows it in a selected list of cities; and diagram 9 shows the relative strength of Protestant, Roman Catholic, and all other bodies, and of those not reported in connection with any religious organization.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

SCHOOLS CONDUCTED BY CHURCH ORGANIZATIONS.

The statistics of Sunday schools, which are limited to 1906, are given in detail by denominations in Table 1 (page 148), and include only those Sunday schools which are conducted by church organizations. They are derived, as in other cases, from the returns for the individual organizations in the several denominations.

Total number of schools, teachers, and scholars.—The following table shows, for 1906, by principal families and separate denominations, the number and per cent of organizations reporting Sunday schools and the number and per cent distribution of Sunday schools, officers and teachers, and scholars.

[1] Less than one-tenth of 1 per cent.

From this table it appears that only 79 per cent of the total number of organizations reported Sunday schools, although in several denominations the percentage was much higher. The reason for the low average is chiefly found in the fact that certain bodies, as shown in Table 1 (page 148), report no Sunday schools. The percentage for the Baptist bodies as a whole is considerably lowered by the small percentage reported for the Southern Baptist Convention, as well as by the fact that the Primitive Baptists report no Sunday schools. For the Lutheran bodies, it should be noted that the parochial schools, in which religious as well as secular instruction is given, to a considerable extent take the place of Sunday schools. This fact affects the percentage of organizations reporting Sunday schools, especially in the Evangelical Lutheran Synodical Conference of America and the Synod for the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Among the Eastern Orthodox Churches there are but few Sunday schools, more attention being given to parish schools in which both secular and religious instruction is given. A comparatively small percentage also of the Jewish congregations report Sunday schools, the religious instruction of their children being provided for by other schools and by private teaching. Similarly, the small percentage reported for "all other bodies" is due to the fact that four of these bodies—Chinese Temples, Theosophical Society in America, Amana Society, and Vedanta Society—maintain no Sunday schools, and with nearly all of the remainder Sunday schools are the exception.

Among the Protestant bodies, the Methodist and Baptist bodies together report 56.4 per cent of the entire number of denominational Sunday schools. Next in order come the Presbyterian and Lutheran bodies and the Disciples or Christians, the five families combined reporting 132,622 Sunday schools, or nearly three-fourths (74.4 per cent) of the entire number, and more than four-fifths (80.3 per cent) of all those reported by Protestant bodies.

From Table 1 (page 148) it appears that in the different families there is frequently a concentration in 2 or 3 bodies. Thus the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the 3 branches of Baptists, the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the Lutherans—General Council, General Synod, and Synodical Conference—report by far the greater part of the Sunday schools in their respective families. The situation is essentially the same in regard to the officers and teachers, and scholars.

Average number of scholars and teachers per school.—The average number of scholars and of teachers per Sunday school, and the average number of scholars per teacher are given for each of the principal families and separate denominations in the following table.

Eastern Orthodox Churches	73	1.4	50.9
All other bodies	43	4.5	9.6

The average number of scholars per school for all denominations, as shown by the above table, is 82, the largest average shown being 140, for the Reformed bodies, and the lowest, 29, for the Church of Christ, Scientist. But this table should be examined in connection with Table 1 (page 148) on account of the divergencies in the families. Thus the average membership for the Reformed bodies, 140, includes averages varying from 159, for the Reformed Church in America, to 45, for the Hungarian Reformed Church in America; the average for the Presbyterian bodies, 105, covers a range from 132, as reported for the single school of the Reformed Presbyterian Church in the United States and Canada, to as low as 32 for the Associate Synod of North America (Associate Presbyterian Church). The situation is essentially the same in regard to the average number of teachers (including officers) per school, and the average number of scholars per teacher. In some cases, as in the Roman Catholic Church, the Eastern Orthodox Churches, and the Jewish congregations, the small average number of teachers is probably due to different methods adopted or to the small number of Sunday schools reported, while the large average of scholars per teacher corresponds to the small average of teachers.

Ratio of communicants to Sunday school scholars.—In order to show the ratio of communicants or members to Sunday school scholars the following table is presented, giving by principal families and separate denominations the average number of communicants per individual church organization, the average number of scholars per school for schools conducted by church organizations, and the ratio of communicants to Sunday school scholars:

[1] Heads of families only.

As shown by this table, the number of communicants to each scholar, for all denominations, is 1.9. There are 3 bodies which show a greater average number of scholars per Sunday school than of communicants per organization, namely, the Mennonite bodies and the United Brethren bodies, each with a ratio of 0.9 communicants to each scholar, and the Evangelical bodies, with 0.8. Of the remaining bodies, those which show a marked variation from the general average for all denominations, are the Roman Catholic Church, with 7.3 communicants per scholar, the Church of Christ, Scientist, with 4.7, and the Eastern Orthodox Churches, with 4.3.

ALL SUNDAY SCHOOLS, INCLUDING UNDENOMINATIONAL SCHOOLS.

In addition to the Sunday schools conducted by church organizations, there are a large number of undenominational and union Sunday schools, and, as the statistics of these are essential to an adequate presentation of the Sunday school work in the United States, they were secured through the agency of the International Sunday School Association. Including these, the total number of Sunday schools reported for 1906 was 192,722, with 1,746,074 officers and teachers, and 15,337,811 scholars, as shown by the following summary:

KIND OF SUNDAY SCHOOL.	1906
	Number of Sunday schools reported.	Number of officers and teachers.	Number of scholars.
All Sunday schools	192,722	1,746,074	15,337,811
Denominational	178,214	1,648,664	14,685,997
Undenominational and union	14,508	97,410	651,814

These figures do not include the mission Sunday schools which are maintained by some bodies, notably the Congregationalists and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, but which are not connected with local organizations. With these exceptions, however, it is believed that the figures given in the summary represent a substantially full report of the Sunday schools of the country.

Distribution by states and territories.—The general statistics of denominational and undenominational Sunday schools at the close of the year 1906 are given by states and territories, in the table which follows:

[1] Oklahoma and Indian Territory combined.

From this table it appears that Pennsylvania has the largest number of Sunday schools, followed closely by Ohio, Texas, and New York. Pennsylvania also leads in the number of denominational Sunday schools, with Ohio second, followed in order by New York and Texas.

Distribution by geographic divisions.—The following table gives the distribution of denominational and undenominational Sunday schools according to geographic divisions, and, in addition, shows for continental United States and for each geographic division separately the per cent which each class bears to all Sunday schools:

GEOGRAPHIC DIVISION.	1906
	All Sunday schools.		Denominational Sunday schools.		Undenominational Sunday schools.		Per cent of all Sunday schools.
	Number.	Per cent distribution.	Number.	Per cent distribution.	Number.	Per cent distribution.	Denominational.	Undenominational.

North Atlantic	34,082	17.7	31,768	17.8	2,314	15.9	93.2	6.8
South Atlantic	37,414	19.4	35,763	20.1	1,651	11.4	95.6	4.4
North Central	64,905	33.7	58,705	32.9	6,200	42.7	90.4	9.6
South Central	46,142	23.9	42,951	24.1	3,191	22.0	93.1	6.9
Western	10,179	5.3	9,027	5.1	1,152	7.9	88.7	11.3

From this table it appears that the percentages for all Sunday schools and for denominational Sunday schools in the various geographic divisions correspond very closely. For the undenominational Sunday schools, however, as already intimated, there is considerable variation. The highest percentage for these schools, 42.7 per cent, shown for the North Central division, is considerably above the percentages for denominational Sunday schools and all Sunday schools for the same division, and the percentage for the Western division is likewise relatively high; while that for the South Atlantic division, 11.4 per cent, is much below the percentages for denominational Sunday schools and all Sunday schools for that division. In the North Atlantic and South Central divisions the percentages for the three classes are approximately the same.

With regard to the relation of denominational and undenominational Sunday schools to the total number of Sunday schools, it is notable that the denominational Sunday schools represent 92.5 per cent of the total and the undenominational 7.5 per cent. If the geographic divisions be considered, the highest percentage of denominational Sunday schools, 95.6, is shown for the South Atlantic division, and the lowest, 88.7, for the Western division, and, conversely, for undenominational Sunday schools, the highest percentage, 11.3, is shown for the Western division; and the lowest, 4.4, for the South Atlantic division. From the last two tables it appears that, in general, the largest representation of the undenominational and union Sunday schools is in those divisions and in those states that are more distinctively rural in character, or which have been settled most recently.

The following table gives for continental United States and for the geographic divisions the average number of scholars per school, the average number of teachers per school, and the average number of scholars per teacher, for all Sunday schools and for the denominational and undenominational Sunday schools separately:

GEOGRAPHIC DIVISION.	1906
	All Sunday schools.			Denominational Sunday schools.			Undenominational Sunday schools.
	Scholars, average per school.	Teachers, average per school.	Scholars, average per teacher.	Scholars, average per school.	Teachers, average per school.	Scholars, average per teacher.	Scholars, average per school.	Teachers, average per school.	Scholars, average per teacher.

Western	78	9.0	8.7	83	9.4	8.9	36	5.8	6.2

For continental United States, as shown by the above table, the average number of scholars per school, for the denominational and undenominational schools taken together, is 80; for the denominational schools, 82; and for the undenominational, 45. The geographic division showing the largest average number of scholars per school, both for denominational and undenominational schools, is the North Atlantic, while the division showing the smallest average number for denominational schools is the South Central, and for undenominational, the Western.

The average number of teachers per school, for continental United States, for all Sunday schools, is 9.1; for the denominational schools, 9.3; and for the undenominational schools, 6.7. The geographic division showing the largest average number of teachers per school, for both the denominational and undenominational schools, is the North Atlantic, and the division showing the smallest average number for each is the South Central.

The average number of scholars per teacher for continental United States, for both classes of schools, is 8.8; for the denominational schools, 8.9; and for the undenominational, 6.7. The geographic division showing the largest average number for denominational schools is the North Atlantic, and for undenominational, the South Central, while the division showing the smallest average number for denominational schools is the North Central, and for undenominational, the Western.

MINISTERS.

The statistics for ministers are given by denominations only. They have been obtained from various authoritative sources, either from the published reports of the several denominations or through correspondence with representatives. They include, in nearly every instance, only those who are duly authorized to administer the sacraments and to perform all the usual functions of the ministry, whether or not in active service as pastors in charge of churches. Licentiates and other similar classes who are sometimes regarded as ministers are not included. The number of ministers is estimated for the following 6 denominations which furnished no returns or only partial returns, namely: United Baptists, Two-Seed-in-the-Spirit Predestinarian Baptists, United American Freewill Baptists (Colored), Church of God and Saints of Christ (Colored), Churches of Christ (Disciples), and African Methodist Episcopal Church. For 2 bodies—the Apostolic Faith Movement and the Independent churches—ministers are not reported, since the number could not be reasonably estimated from the information received. The first of these bodies is small, having but 6 organizations. The Independent churches number 1,079, but since they have no central organization from which a report on the number of ministers could be obtained, and since many of them appear to be supplied by ministers connected with some of the various denominations, no attempt was made to arrive at an estimate of the number of ministers. Two bodies, having 1 organization each—the Reformed Presbyterian Church (Covenanted) and the Reformed Presbyterian Church in the United States and Canada—report no ministers, as the former is supplied by a theological student, and the latter by ministers from other Presbyterian bodies. There are 15 denominations which report no regular ministry, namely, the Bahais, Christadelphians, Christian Israelite Church, Plymouth Brethren (4 bodies), United Society of Believers (Shakers), Amana Society, Society for Ethical Culture, the 4 Theosophical societies, and the Vedanta Society.

TOTAL NUMBER.

The number of ministers, as reported for 1890 and 1906, is given in detail by denominations in Table 8 (page 514). The following table shows, by principal families and separate denominations, the number of ministers as reported for 1890 and 1906, together with the actual and relative increase since 1890:

[1] Includes figures for Alaska, not returned separately.
[2] Decrease.
[3] Per cent not shown where base is less than 100.
[4] Not reported.

The family reporting the greatest number of ministers for 1906 is the Baptist, with 43,790, or 26.6 per cent of the total, while the Methodist bodies come next in order, with 39,737, or 24.1 per cent of the total. These 2 families show a little more than one-half the entire number of ministers. The Presbyterian bodies report 12,456 ministers, the Disciples or Christians, 8,741, and the Lutheran bodies, 7,841.

According to the figures given in the table, the total increase in the number of ministers since 1890 is 53,794, or 48.4 per cent. The Protestant bodies show an increase of 46,846, or 47 per cent, and the Roman Catholic Church an increase of 6,011, or 65.6 per cent. Among the Protestant bodies, those showing the greatest absolute increase are the Baptist bodies, with a gain of 18,144, or 70.7 per cent; the Methodist bodies, with a gain of 9,737, or 32.5 per cent; the Disciples or Christians, with a gain of 4,968, or 131.7 per cent; the Lutheran bodies, with a gain of 3,250, or 70.8 per cent; and the Presbyterian bodies, with a gain of 2,008, or 19.2 per cent.

Of the Baptist bodies, as indicated by the figures in Table 8 (page 514), the National Baptist Convention (Colored) leads, with an increase of 11,649 ministers, or 213 per cent; and is followed by the Southern Baptist Convention, with an increase of 4,359, or 48.7 per cent. The Freewill Baptists show a gain of 482, or 408.5 per cent. Among the Methodist bodies, the African Methodist Episcopal Church leads, with an increase of 2,879 ministers, or 86.7 per cent; and is followed by the Methodist Episcopal Church, with an increase of 2,056, or 13.3 per cent; and the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, with an increase of 1,517, or 96.9 per cent. Among the Lutheran bodies, the Synodical Conference comes first, with an increase of 1,103 ministers, or 86 per cent; and is followed by the General Synod, with an increase of 345, or 35.7 per cent; and the United Norwegian Lutheran Church, with an increase of 344, or 315.6 per cent. Among the Presbyterian bodies, the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America ranks first, with an increase of 1,669 ministers, or 28.1 per cent, and the Presbyterian Church in the United States comes next, with an increase of 477, or 42.2 per cent.

The great increase shown for the Church of Christ, Scientist, is apparently due in large part to a difference in the organization of the church, the returns for 1906 showing 2 ministers, or "readers," to each organization, whereas the report for 1890 showed only 26 ministers to 221 organizations. In the case of the Jewish congregations also, the large increase is probably due chiefly to a difference in the basis of reporting. Moreover, it is possible that the report concerning ministers of this denomination for 1890 was incomplete on account of the special difficulty, in this case, of obtaining complete statistics.

The decrease in the number of ministers, as shown in the table, for the Adventist bodies appears mainly in connection with the Advent Christian Church, while in the case of the Latter-day Saints, it appears wholly in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The decrease shown for these bodies, as well as for the Christians (Christian Connection) and the United Brethren bodies, may in some instances be due to an actual decrease in the number of ministers, but is probably due in most instances either to incomplete returns, or to a difference in the basis of reporting the ministers at the two periods. The Latter-day Saints, especially, have numerous orders in the ministry, and the question might have arisen as to how many of them should be included, as properly corresponding with the regular ordained ministry of other denominations.

The figures given for "other Protestant bodies" and for "all other bodies" for 1906 are not comparable with those for 1890, since the bodies composing these two classes are not entirely the same for the two periods, some being included in each class for 1906 which were not in existence, or not reported, in 1890.

Ratio of organizations to ministers.—The ratio of organizations to ministers for 1906 and 1890, respectively, is shown for the principal families and separate denominations in the following table:

[1] Ministers not reported.

From this table it appears that for all denominations the average number of organizations to each minister for 1906 was 1.3, as compared with 1.5 for 1890. The Protestant bodies showing the most marked changes are the Adventist bodies and the Church of Christ, Scientist. The increase shown for the Adventist bodies—from 1.3 organizations per minister in 1890 to 2.2 in 1906—is due mainly to a decrease in the number of ministers reported for 1906, by the Advent Christian Church. The figures for the Church of Christ, Scientist, on the other hand, show 0.5 organization per minister for 1906 as against 8.5 for 1890, this great disproportion being due apparently, as already explained, to a difference in the organization of the church at the two periods. The Roman Catholic Church had 0.8 organization to each minister in 1906, as against 1.1 in 1890, a difference due apparently to an actual relative increase in the number of ministers. The Jewish congregations had 1.6 organizations per minister in 1906, as against 2.7 in 1890, while the Latter-day Saints had 0.7 in 1906, as against 0.4 in 1890, the difference in both cases being probably in large part due, as already indicated, to a difference in the basis of reporting for the two periods. The large increase in the number of organizations per minister shown by the Eastern Orthodox Churches—from 0.1 in 1890 to 3.8 in 1906—is due mainly to the large increase of organizations belonging to the Greek Orthodox Church, as compared with the increase in the number of ministers. Owing to the impossibility of obtaining the number of ministers connected with the Independent churches for 1906, the figures for these churches are not presented in the table.

Ratio of communicants or members to ministers.—The following table shows for each of the principal families and separate denominations the average number of communicants or members to each minister reported for 1906 and 1890, respectively:

[1] Ministers not reported. [2] Membership not comparable.

For all denominations, as shown by the above table, the average number of members to a minister for 1906 was 200, as compared with 186 for 1890. For Protestant bodies the average for 1906 was 139 members to each minister, as compared with 141 for 1890; and for the Roman Catholic Church, 796 for 1906, as compared with 681 for 1890. The increase in the figures shown in the table for the Adventist bodies is due mainly, as already stated, to a decrease in the number of ministers reported in 1906 for the Advent Christian Church, while the marked decrease shown for the Church of Christ, Scientist—from 336 members per minister in 1890 to 67 in 1906—is apparently due, as already explained, to a difference in the organization of the church at the two periods. Owing to the impossibility of obtaining the number of ministers connected with the Independent churches for 1906, no figures are presented in the above table for these churches, and on account of the difference in the basis of reporting the membership of the Jewish congregations at the two periods, as already explained, the figures for this body, also, are omitted from the table. The difference between 1906 and 1890 in the average number of communicants per minister shown for the Latter-day Saints is mainly due to a difference in the basis of reporting the ministers, already referred to, while the large difference shown for the Eastern Orthodox Churches is due mainly to the large increase in the number of communicants, as compared with ministers in the Greek Orthodox Church.

AVERAGE ANNUAL SALARIES PAID TO MINISTERS.

In connection with this report an attempt has been made for the first time to secure official statistics concerning the salaries paid to ministers in the respective denominations. They were collected by means of the general schedule, by which it was sought to obtain a report of the amount of annual salary received by each minister serving one or more churches. The results are not entirely satisfactory, on account of the failure of some to report the salary and of others to report with sufficient clearness. In some instances it could not be determined whether the amount reported was the yearly or monthly salary, and in other instances whether it was that paid to a single minister or to two or more serving jointly or in succession during the same year. In cases where a minister served more than one church it was not always clear whether he had reported his entire salary on each schedule returned by him or only that part of it which was paid by the particular church for which the schedule was filled. In addition to this, 15 of the 186 denominations, as already stated, have no regular ministry, and 69 others either pay no stated salaries to their ministers or made returns which were not sufficiently complete to warrant tabulation. Of the 201,351 organizations composing the 102 remaining denominations, 164,229, or 81.6 per cent, made returns to this inquiry which there is reason to believe are substantially complete and accurate, and it is thought that they embrace a sufficient number of organizations of the respective denominations to be fairly representative of conditions as to the average salaries paid to ministers. These returns are presented in the following table, which gives for each denomination represented the total number of organizations, the number of organizations reporting salaries, the number of ministers whose salaries are reported, the total amount of salary reported, and the average salary per minister. These figures are given for continental United States, for each of the four principal classes of cities, and for the area outside of the principal cities. It should be remembered that the table is not designed to show the total amount of money paid for salaries by these bodies, since, as already stated, all of the organizations and ministers connected with them are not represented, but simply shows the average annual salary paid, as indicated by the returns for the organizations which are represented in the table.

As shown by this table, the average annual salary per minister for all denominations represented, for continental United States as a whole, is $663. The denomination showing the highest average is the Unitarian, with $1,653, while the denominations next in order are the Protestant Episcopal Church, $1,242; the Universalists, $1,238; the General Convention of the New Jerusalem in the United States of America, $1,233; the Jewish congregations, $1,222; the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, $1,177; the Reformed Church in America, $1,170; the United Presbyterian Church of North America, $1,096; the Congregationalists, $1,042; the Christian Catholic Church in Zion, $1,037; and the Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America, $1,008. Among the denominations showing an average salary considerably lower than the general average for the United States are the Advent Christian Church; all the Baptist bodies except the Northern Baptist Convention; the Christian Union; the Christians (Christian Connection); the Church of Christ, Scientist; the General Eldership of the Churches of God in North America; the Society of Friends (Orthodox); the colored Methodist bodies; the Methodist Protestant, Wesleyan Methodist, and Free Methodist churches; the Salvation Army; and the Volunteers of America. In the case of most of these last-named bodies, as shown by the table, many of the organizations reporting are outside of the principal cities, and many of them are doubtless in rural regions, and this fact accounts largely for the comparatively low average salary. The low average shown for the Church of Christ, Scientist, is due to the fact that most of those who serve as ministers, or readers, are persons having other vocations and not dependent on the salaries paid by the churches. In the case of the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America, the allowance made for the officers serving at the various posts is usually based upon their probable expenses, and is practically limited to these expenses.

The average salary shown for the large cities is considerably higher as a rule than the general average for the denomination, while for the area outside of the principal cities it is usually somewhat less. Moreover, the average salary generally corresponds to the grade of the cities. For all denominations together it ranges from $1,223 for cities of the first class to $1,110 for those of the second class; $1,063 for those of the third class; $972 for those of the fourth class; and $573 for the area outside of the principal cities. In individual denominations the conditions vary. In the Northern Baptist Convention the average for cities of the first class is $1,580; of the second class, $1,420; of the third class, $1,381; of the fourth class, $1,248; and for the area outside of the principal cities, $683. The figures for the Disciples of Christ show a regular gradation from $1,326 per minister for cities of the first class to $1,250 for those of the fourth class; for the Methodist Episcopal Church, from $1,422 for cities of the first class to $1,187 for those of the fourth class; and for the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, from $2,169 for those of the first class to $1,524 for those of the fourth class.

In the Southern Baptist Convention, the average salary ranges from $1,793 for cities of the first class to $1,358 for those of the fourth class, and among the Congregationalists from $1,938 for cities of the first class to $1,512 for those of the fourth class, but in the case of both these denominations the average for cities of the third class is a little larger than for those of the second class. Among the Lutheran bodies there is considerable difference; some, as the General Council, showing a regular gradation; others, as the United Norwegian, showing larger averages for cities of the third and fourth classes.

The lower average salary shown by some denominations for a higher class of cities than for a lower is in most cases due to the existence in the higher class of cities of an unusually large number of weak or mission churches. For example, in the case of the Southern Baptist Convention, which shows an average salary per minister of $1,505 for cities of the third class and only $1,490 for cities of the second class, the churches in the third class have an average membership of 472, and in the second class of only 362, indicating that the churches in the third class are also financially stronger on the average than those in the second class.

In the Protestant Episcopal Church the average is from $1,873 in cities of the first class to $1,517 in those of the fourth, there being but little difference in the figures for the second, third, and fourth classes of cities. In the case of the Roman Catholic Church, the figures show but little difference between the general average and that for the various classes of cities or for the area outside of the principal cities, the reason being that in this denomination the salaries are fixed for the diocese, being in general the same for the rural districts as for the large cities. Of the 24 ministers reported by the 4 organizations of the Christian Catholic Church in Zion, for the area outside the principal cities, 21 are reported at Zion City, and are probably connected with the headquarters of the denomination at that place.

Among the denominations included in this report with those not paying regular salaries to their ministers, and hence not represented in this table, there are several, as for example, the Freewill Baptists and the German Baptist Brethren Church (Conservative), in which a considerable number of the organizations pay stated salaries, although it is not a general custom. Some of these denominations, among which are the ones just mentioned, appear to be in the transitional state from the unsalaried to the salaried ministry basis.

DATE OF ESTABLISHMENT OF RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS.

An inquiry was made in 1906 as to the date of establishment, meaning the year in which the local church was organized. From the nature of the reports made, however, it is evident that to a certain extent the inquiry was misunderstood, and that in some cases the date given refers either to the founding of the denomination to which the church belongs or to matters of general ecclesiastical history, such as the origin of the Christian Church, or the date of the Reformation, rather than to the date of establishment of the local church.

With a view to presenting the origin and growth of the various denominations, the years reported have been arranged by periods, and the following have been selected as on the whole the most significant: Prior to 1800; from 1800 to 1849; from 1850 to 1899, by decades; and from 1900 to 1906. The years 1800 to 1849 have been included in one period chiefly because this was a period of preparation, the forward movement in denominational life beginning practically about the middle of the century.

The following table shows by denominations in detail the total number of organizations, the number of organizations reporting date of establishment and the percentage which they form of the total number of organizations in the body, and the number of organizations established during each of the different periods mentioned:

[1] Per cent not shown where base is less than 100.

From this table it appears that 179,331 organizations, or 84.5 per cent of the total number, made a report as to the date of establishment. For most of the smaller denominations—those having less than 100 organizations in 1906—there was either a full report as to date of establishment or a report from all but a few organizations. Three of these smaller bodies, however—Old Order German Baptist Brethren, Reformed Mennonite Church, and Church of God in Christ (Mennonites)—made no report whatever, while for the Apostolic Lutheran Church (Finnish), the African Union Methodist Protestant Church, the Separate Baptists, and one or two other bodies, the returns were very incomplete. Among the denominations having 100 or more organizations in 1906, the following stand highest in respect to the percentage of organizations reporting date of establishment: The Brethren (Plymouth)—I, 100 per cent; Spiritualists, 99.8 per cent; Salvation Army, 99.7 per cent; Christian Reformed Church, 98.9 per cent; Unitarians, 98.9 per cent; Congregationalists, 98.8 per cent; Reformed Church in America, 98.6 per cent; and Colored Cumberland Presbyterian Church, 98.5 per cent.

Among the denominations for which comparatively low percentages are shown are the Disciples of Christ, 68.5 per cent; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 66.4 per cent; Jewish congregations, 62.9 per cent; United American Freewill Baptists (Colored), 60.6 per cent; Friends (Hicksite), 45.4 per cent; Colored Primitive Baptists in America, 41.4 per cent; United Baptists, 37.2 per cent; and Greek Orthodox Church, 8.1 per cent.

There were 44 denominations reporting organizations established prior to 1800. It does not follow, however, that all of them had a denominational existence at that time. In some cases churches organized prior to that date subsequently joined denominations of more recent formation.

Fifty denominations report their earliest organization in the period from 1800 to 1849, but among these, also, there are cases in which churches now connected with a certain denomination were at that time identified with some other body.

For purposes of further comparison the following table is presented, which shows, for all denominations and for each family or separate denomination for which a report as to date of establishment was made by more than 100 organizations, the percentage of organizations established during each of the different periods specified:

[1] Less than one-tenth of 1 per cent.

The 179,331 organizations which were in existence at the close of 1906 and for which the date of establishment was reported, are subdivided as follows, according to the different periods of organization shown by the two tables preceding:

PERIOD.	Number.	Per cent of total.
Total	179,331	100.0
Prior to 1800	3,637	2.0
1800 to 1849	21,929	12.2
1850 to 1859	12,816	7.1
1860 to 1869	16,114	9.0
1870 to 1879	25,851	14.4
1880 to 1889	32,771	18.3
1900 to 1906	31,386	17.5

Considering the figures for all denominations together, it is noticeable that beginning with the middle of the last century, they are much larger for each successive period, making allowance for the fact that the latest period includes only seven years. If organizations are established at a corresponding rate during the remaining three years of the present decade, the number for the entire decade will be 44,837, and the percentage 23.3. Part of this steady advance in the number of organizations established in the successive decades is of course only apparent. Some organizations disappear within a longer or shorter time after their establishment, and the more remote the decade, the smaller is the proportion of all organizations established in that decade that still survive, and the greater the understatement in the table of the total number of organizations established in that decade. But the chief cause of the steady advance is the fact that the population of the country is constantly increasing.

The denominations showing the largest percentages of organizations established before 1800 are as follows:

Unitarians	23.7
Associate Reformed Synod of the South (Presbyterian)	18.5
Reformed Church in America	17.1
Moravian Church (Unitas Fratrum)	15.9
Mennonite Church	14.2
Congregationalists	12.2
Friends (Orthodox)	12.0
Reformed Church in the United States	11.2
United Synod in the South (Lutheran)	10.2

Of the 9 denominations listed, the Unitarian is the only one for which the percentage for the period prior to 1800 is equaled by that of no period later. In the case of the Associate Reformed Synod of the South (Presbyterian), the Moravian Church (Unitas Fratrum), and the Reformed Church in America, the percentage for the period prior to 1800 is equaled once; in the case of the Mennonite Church, twice; in the case of the Congregationalists and the Friends (Orthodox), three times; and in the case of the Reformed Church in the United States and the United Synod in the South (Lutheran), five times.

The percentages for the decade 1860 to 1869 are only a little larger than for the decade 1850 to 1859, but for the decade 1870 to 1879, the figures are much larger than for the preceding decade. The number of organizations established in the decade 1860 to 1869 was undoubtedly reduced on account of the Civil War and the reduction would have been greater had it not been for the remarkable extension of the colored denominations through the South immediately after that war. Thus 11.7 per cent of the organizations of the Colored Baptists were established in the decade 1860 to 1869, 12.5 per cent of the organizations of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, and 16.5 per cent of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, as compared with five-tenths of 1 per cent, 1.2 per cent, and 1.3 per cent, respectively, for the preceding decade.

The decade 1870 to 1879 was one of general prosperity, which marked the beginning of a large amount of immigration, and shows a corresponding advance in the percentages. The impulse received in that decade, however, was not continued to the same extent through the succeeding decade, 1880 to 1889, and the influence of the period of general financial depression which occurred in the decade 1890 to 1899 is manifest in the slight increase in per cent of organizations formed during that period. In general, the record of these tables accords very closely with the history of the times and of the denominations.

The seven years 1900 to 1906 show a notable increase, their percentage of the total, as already indicated, being at the rate of 23.3 for the whole decade. A high percentage for the latest period is shown even for some of the older denominations. The Freewill Baptists, with a percentage of 29.9 for 1890 to 1899, showed a percentage of 25.3 for 1900 to 1906, and the General Baptists, Congregational Methodists, and Seventh-day Adventists seem likewise to have entered on a new period of expansion.

Among the bodies showing a decline in the number of new organizations formed during this period are the Northern Baptist Convention, the National Baptist Convention (Colored), the Congregationalists, the United Evangelical Church, the Society of Friends (Orthodox), the Reformed Church in America, the Swedish Evangelical Mission Covenant, the Swedish Evangelical Free Mission, the United Brethren (Old Constitution), and the Universalists. The United Evangelical Church was organized as a denomination in the decade 1890 to 1899, and reported 48.3 per cent of its organizations as established in that decade. The Swedish Evangelical Mission Covenant and the Swedish Evangelical Free Mission both reported high figures in the two preceding decades, 1880 to 1889 and 1890 to 1899, as the result of immigration. It was of course not to be expected that the same rate of increase would be maintained for these denominations in the period 1900 to 1906. In the case of the other denominations mentioned the retrogression is slight.

For the bodies most affected by immigration, especially the Lutheran bodies, the percentages for the later decades are naturally comparatively high. The percentage for the Lutheran bodies as a whole for the decade 1880 to 1889 was 19.3 per cent; for that of 1890 to 1899, 22 per cent; and for the seven years 1900 to 1906, 20 per cent. It is noteworthy that the percentage for the Roman Catholic Church for the decade 1890 to 1899 (17.2) was somewhat less than for the preceding decade (18.7), but for the seven years 1900 to 1906 the percentage was 20.2, which represents a much higher decennial rate.

The denominations showing the largest percentages of organizations formed during the seven years from 1900 to 1906 are:

Eastern Orthodox Churches	67.3
Spiritualists	61.2
Congregational Methodist Church	60.0
Evangelistic associations	51.1
Church of Christ, Scientist	47.6
Independent churches	47.6
Finnish Evangelical Lutheran Church (Suomi Synod)	47.1
Seventh-day Adventist Denomination	40.7
United American Freewill Baptist Church (Colored)	40.1
Salvation Army	39.6
Churches of Christ (Disciples or Christians)	37.8
Norwegian Lutheran Free Church	35.0
General Baptists	34.8

A high percentage for a denomination in any particular decade indicates either its organization as a denomination or some special influence, such as immigration, though, as already indicated, the formal organization of a denomination does not preclude the report of individual organizations showing an earlier date. Thus the Primitive Baptists became a distinct denomination in the period 1800 to 1849, as indicated by the percentage reported, 38.4. Among those churches, however, there were some, 3.7 per cent of the total, which were organized prior to 1800.

LANGUAGES USED IN THE CONDUCT OF CHURCH SERVICES.

In the census of 1906, for the first time, an attempt was made to secure complete reports from the various denominations as to the languages used in the conduct of religious services. This was considered in the report for 1890 an important element in the statement of the work of the churches, especially among the foreign population, but there was no general enumeration or classification, although summaries, recognized as approximate, were given of the languages used in the Lutheran bodies and the Methodist Episcopal Church, and mention was made of those used in other bodies.

In the schedules sent out in 1906 each organization was asked to state the language used in church services. Of the 186 denominations, 91 made a full report as to the language used in the church services; 83 furnished reports from at least 90 per cent of their organizations; and only 12 from less than 90 per cent. The total number of organizations reporting was 204,268, or 96.2 per cent of the total. A considerable number of organizations which made no report apparently took it for granted, as will be seen later, that it would be understood that English was used. It follows therefore that the record of the languages used in church services is reasonably complete.

The organizations reporting are classified under three heads: (1) Those using English only; (2) those using English and one or more foreign languages; and (3) those using one or more foreign languages. The American Indian languages are classed as foreign.

English only.—The following table shows the denominations which report the use of English only; the total number of organizations and of communicants or members reported by them; the number of organizations reporting services conducted in English only; and the per cent which these constitute of the total organizations of the respective denominations:

[1] No statistics are available.

From this table it appears that the number of denominations reporting the use of English only is 72, the total number of organizations reported by them, 15,844, and the total number of communicants or members, 1,023,672. While the aggregate is large, many of the denominations of which it is composed are small, and, as a whole, they represent only 7.5 per cent of the total number of church organizations in continental United States and 3.1 per cent of the communicants or members. Only 6 have over 50,000 members each, and of these 2 are colored. More than 60 per cent of the communicants or members belong to bodies located chiefly in the Southern states where the foreign element is small; while the larger bodies included in the list which are located chiefly in the Northern states, such as the Free Baptists; Church of Christ, Scientist; Religious Society of Friends

(Hicksite); Universalists, etc., are, as appears in the statements descriptive of the respective denominations, not identified with work among the foreign population. It is noteworthy that among them are included some bodies, as the Brethren Church (Progressive Dunkers), which, while chiefly of non-English speaking origin, emphasize the use of English in the church services.

In regard to the organizations belonging to the denominations listed in this table which make no report as to language, it is to be noted that they constitute only 10.8 per cent of the total number of organizations, and that in nearly every case they belong to denominations so thoroughly identified with the use of English that it might naturally seem superfluous to mention the language. Such are the Separate, United, and Primitive Baptists, the Freewill Colored Baptists, the colored Methodist bodies, etc. It may thus be safely assumed that the comparatively few organizations not reporting may be properly classed as using English only, so that the figures given, 15,844 organizations, with 1,023,672 communicants or members, may be considered to represent those denominations which use the English language exclusively in church services.

Foreign languages.—The following table shows the denominations which report a part or all of their organizations as using a foreign language; the total number of organizations and of communicants or members reported by the denominations in question; the number of organizations with membership, (1) reporting services conducted in English only; (2) reporting a foreign language alone or in addition to English; and (3) not reporting language.

From this table it appears that the number of denominations which report a part or all of their organizations as using a foreign language is 114, with 196,386 organizations, or 92.5 per cent of the total number in continental United States, and 31,912,773 communicants or members, or 96.9 per cent of the total in the United States. Of these organizations, 165,549, with 22,624,595 members, report services conducted in English only; 24,594, with 8,394,229 members, report the use of a foreign language alone or in addition to English; and 6,243, with 893,949 members, make no report of the language used in their church services.

It shows that in those denominations which report the use, in whole or in part, of one or more foreign languages, 84.3 per cent of their organizations, with 70.9 per cent of the members, report English only in their church services; while 12.5 per cent of their organizations, with 26.3 per cent of their membership, report foreign languages alone or in addition to English. If the organizations presented in the table on page 108, which shows the denominations reporting the use of English only, be combined with the organizations in this table reporting English only the result is 181,393, the total number of organizations reporting the use of English only, or 85.5 per cent of all the organizations in continental United States, with a membership of 23,648,267, or 71.8 per cent of the total membership.

It is probable also that of the 6,243 organizations in this table, with 893,949 members, which make no report of language, a large number, as already suggested in regard to those in the preceding table which make no report, failed to do so because they took it for granted that it would be understood that English was used. This will be evident from an inspection of the denominations in question. In the National Baptist Convention (Colored) only 2 organizations out of 18,534 report any language other than English, and as will be seen from a succeeding table, they use an American Indian language; it is therefore extremely probable that the great majority, at least, of the 305 organizations of this body which make no report, use English and English only. The same may be said in regard to the Christians (Christian Connection); the Disciples or Christians; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; the African Methodist Episcopal Church; the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and others. With regard to certain bodies, however, as the Evangelical Association, the Lutheran bodies, the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the Protestant Episcopal Church, and other bodies which report a considerable number of organizations using some language other than English, and especially with regard to the Jewish congregations and the Roman Catholic Church, the same can not be said. No line, therefore, can be drawn, and the nonreporting organizations must be left out of account, although it is necessary to remember that they undoubtedly include a considerable proportion of English speaking congregations. It is also to be remembered that, as appears in a succeeding table, a considerable proportion of the organizations which report some other language than English use English also. The number of organizations reporting the use of English in connection with some other language is given as 7,906, and their membership as 3,371,628, while 16,688 organizations, with a membership of 5,022,601, are reported as using foreign languages only. It thus appears that only 7.9 per cent of the total number of organizations and 15.2 per cent of the membership, or 6 per cent of the estimated population of the United States in 1906, are reported as using foreign languages only in church services. As approximately 2,000,000 immigrants, using foreign languages, entered the country during the years 1905 and 1906, it is evident that the adoption of English by these immigrant communities has progressed rapidly. In this connection it should be noted that by no means all of these immigrants are identified with church life.

The significance of the figures depends somewhat upon the denominations reporting them. The denominations reporting a part or all of their organizations as using a foreign language may be divided into four classes: (1) Those in which the use of English is predominant, and in which the organizations reporting the use of a foreign language may be considered the result of evangelistic or mission work; (2) those which are also predominantly English speaking, but in which organizations using foreign languages are provided to meet the needs of immigrant communities naturally affiliated with the particular denomination; (3) those which are solely or very largely made up of the immigrant element, to which the use of English, whether in church services or in ordinary life, is as yet unfamiliar, and in which there are comparatively few English speaking organizations; and (4) those which report no organizations using English only.

In the first class the percentage of organizations using a foreign language is naturally small; in the second class it is more nearly equal to that of organizations using English only; and in the third it is of course exceedingly large. It is noticeable also that in the first class the average membership of the organizations using foreign languages is generally smaller than in those reporting English only; in the second class it is about the same as for those reporting English only; in the third class it is somewhat larger; while the largest averages of membership in congregations using foreign languages are in most cases found in the fourth class.

Among the denominations of the first class interested particularly in evangelistic work in immigrant communities are the Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodist Episcopal Church, Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the Protestant Episcopal Church. Of the Baptist organizations, 1.6 per cent report the use of a foreign language, and they have an average membership of 95, as compared with 112 for those reporting English only. Of the Congregational organizations, 8.2 per cent use a foreign language, and their average membership is 82, as compared with 127 for those reporting English only. In the Methodist Episcopal Church the percentage of organizations reporting a foreign language is 4.7, and their average membership, 71, as compared with 102 for those reporting English only; and for the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America the percentage is also 4.7, and the average membership, 111, as compared with 152 for those reporting English only. In the Protestant Episcopal Church the percentage is 2.6, but the average membership is 142, as compared with 133 for those using English only; an exception explained by the fact shown in the following table that an unusually large average is reported by the Indian mission churches in the West.

Among the denominations in the second class, in which special provision is made for affiliated non-English speaking immigrants, are the Evangelical, Moravian, and Reformed bodies, and the Roman Catholic Church. In the Evangelical bodies the percentage of organizations reporting other languages than English is 39.3, and the average membership, 67, as compared with 63 for those reporting English only; in the Moravian bodies, the percentage is 46.2, and the average membership, 132, as compared with 140; and in the Reformed bodies, the percentage is 42, and the average membership, 193, as compared with 160. In the last case the situation is affected by the Reformed Hungarian (Magyar) Church which uses Magyar only. In the Roman Catholic Church 37.7 per cent of the organizations report the use of some foreign language, and an average membership of 1,134, as compared with 870 for those reporting English only.

The leading bodies in the third class, largely made up of non-English speaking organizations, are the Jewish congregations, the German Evangelical Synod, and the Lutheran bodies. Of the Jewish congregations, those reporting a foreign language represent 53.8 per cent of the total, and an average membership of 87, as compared with 74 for those using English only. It should be remembered in this connection that 40 per cent of the Jewish congregations made no report as to language, and only heads of families are returned as members. Among the Lutheran bodies conditions vary greatly. Of the 24 bodies, 14 report no organizations using English only, but they are the smaller bodies. Of the larger bodies, the General Synod and the United Synod, South, are predominantly English, and the remainder predominantly foreign, in regard to the language used in church services. Taking the Lutheran bodies as a whole, 77.2 per cent of the organizations report the use of a foreign language, while the average membership in these organizations is 179, as compared with 126 for those reporting English only.

In the fourth class, denominations reporting no organizations using English only, are included the Armenian Church, the Buddhists, the Eastern Orthodox Churches, and the Swedish Evangelical bodies. In most cases one or more organizations are reported which use English in addition to the foreign language. In regard to these bodies, the average size of organizations is noteworthy. In the Armenian Church the average membership is 272; in the Japanese Temples, 264; and in the Eastern Orthodox Churches, 315.

The comparative importance of these four classes, as indicated by their relative size, is as follows:

	Organizations.	Membership.
Total	196,386	31,912,773
First class	155,954	16,020,909
Second class	23,068	13,094,126
Third class	16,371	2,601,517

From this table it appears that of the 24,594 organizations with 8,394,229 members which reported the use of a foreign language, 16,688 organizations with 5,022,601 members use the specified foreign language or languages only; while 7,906 organizations with 3,371,628 members use English also. The religious bodies reporting a membership of over 25,000 belonging to organizations which use the specified foreign languages only are: The Lutheran bodies, 7,242 organizations with 1,122,981 members; the Roman Catholic Church, 2,176 organizations with 3,064,436 members; the Methodist Episcopal Church, 1,228 organizations with 84,530 members; the German Evangelical Synod of North America, 952 organizations with 201,137 members; the Jewish congregations, 752 organizations with 58,988 members; the Evangelical Association, 554 organizations with 33,797 members; the Northern Baptist Convention, 548 organizations with 46,669 members; the Greek Orthodox Church, 334 organizations with 90,751 members; and the Reformed Church in the United States, 260 organizations with 41,574 members. Of the Lutheran bodies the Synodical Conference reports 2,433 organizations with 456,734 members; the General Council, 984 organizations with 186,401 members; the United Norwegian Lutheran Church, 807 organizations with 119,802 members; and the Synod of Iowa, 722 organizations with 92,113 members.

Of organizations which use the specified foreign language or languages and English, the Lutheran bodies report 2,566 with 631,374 members; and the Roman Catholic Church, 2,535 with 2,277,587 members. The only other denominations which report a membership of over 25,000 belonging to such organizations are: The Reformed Church in the United States, 434 organizations with 105,621 members; the Evangelical Association, 363 organizations with 25,730 members; and the the German Evangelical Synod of North America, 236 organizations with 87,556 members.

In the case of nearly all the religious bodies, the number of organizations using the specified foreign languages and English is considerably smaller than the number using the specified foreign languages only. The principal denominations in which the number of organizations using English also is larger than the number using the specified foreign languages only are the Roman Catholic Church and the Reformed Church in the United States. Among the Lutheran bodies, the United Synod in the South reports no organizations using a foreign language only, and only 5 using a foreign language and English. Three of the larger Lutheran bodies, the General Synod, the General Council, and the Synod of Ohio, while reporting a greater number of organizations using the specified foreign languages only, at the same time report a greater number of members belonging to organizations using English also.

The average membership of the organizations which use the specified foreign languages and English is, as a rule, larger, and in many instances much larger, than that of the organizations which use the specified foreign languages only. A notable exception is the Roman Catholic Church, where the average membership of the organizations using the specified foreign languages only is 1,408, while the average membership of those that use the specified foreign languages and English is only 898. A partial explanation of this is found in the fact that a considerable number of Roman Catholic organizations using foreign languages only report a very large membership. Thus, a French parish in California reports 6,800 members, and an Italian and Portuguese parish, 8,075 members; while in Illinois 32 Polish parishes aggregate 122,341 members, an average of 3,823; and 9 Bohemian parishes, 34,955 members, an average of 3,884. Similar conditions exist elsewhere and indicate large non-English speaking communities provided in each case with a single church which, with its numerous services, meets the needs of the community.

It proved difficult in some instances to know the languages reported. Sometimes the nationality rather than the language appears to have been given, and sometimes the language of the liturgy rather than that of the sermon or address, while in still other cases both were reported. The following instances call for special mention. Several organizations reported the use of the Austrian language. As there is no distinctively Austrian language, the presumption is that German is intended, inasmuch as great care is taken to specify the other languages—Bohemian, Croatian, Magyar, etc.—used in that polyglot empire. Accordingly whenever Austrian is used the term (German) follows. Similarly a number of organizations reported Belgian, but in these cases there was nothing to indicate whether French or Flemish was intended, and a note to that effect is appended. Considerable difficulty was experienced in regard to the various forms of Slavic. The terms reported included Slav, Slavonic, Slavonish, Slavish, Ancient Slavonic, Old Slavish, Old Slavonian, Old Slavonic, and Vetero Slavish. From the type of organizations reporting it is probable that in the great majority of cases the language referred to was what may be called the Old Church Slavic, the language of the liturgy, which is the basis for all the Slavic languages. Accordingly all of these have been included under the term Slavic. It is noticeable that the term Russian was not reported by the organizations of the Russian Orthodox Church, although that is uniformly the language of the sermon or address, but Slavic, or its equivalent, Old Russian, was reported. On the other hand the Roman Catholic churches did not report Latin, the language of the liturgy of all except the Uniat churches, but did report the spoken language. Hebrew, as reported by the Jewish congregations, is evidently the language of the service, but as reported by the Protestant denominations, at least in a considerable number of cases, it is undoubtedly equivalent to Yiddish, the two terms being used interchangeably by many. The term Syro-Arabic is used to indicate the form of Arabic used in Syria, which differs somewhat, though not materially, from the forms used in Egypt, Arabia, etc.

Scarcely less significant than the variety of languages used is the combination of languages in use in the same local organization. Some combinations seem natural, as when one language is evidently that of the liturgy and the other that of the address, as Slavic and Servian, or when two cognate languages are used, as Norwegian and Swedish, but such combinations as "German, Italian, Scandinavian, and English;" or "Chinese, Greek, Magyar, Polish, Slovak, and English;" or "Armenian, Chinese, Hebrew, Italian, and English," illustrate very vividly the cosmopolitan character of the congregations. This is particularly noticeable in the Roman Catholic Church and in those Protestant bodies which are more closely identified with evangelistic work among the foreign population.

Alphabetical list.—In no other way, perhaps, is the cosmopolitan character of the United States brought out more clearly than by the number and diversity of the languages used in the conduct of church services. Undoubtedly many others are spoken by individuals, but the fact that these have a definite place in the religious service of so many communities is of the greatest significance. In the following table the languages reported are arranged alphabetically, and the number of denominations and of organizations, with membership, reporting them, whether alone or in conjunction with some other language, is given. Since many organizations report the use of two or more languages it is evident that there is much duplication in the figures.

From the table it appears that German (aside from Austrian) is reported by 77 denominations; the American Indian languages, by 25; Norwegian, by 22; Swedish, by 21; Danish, by 19; French, by 15; and Italian, by 13. In respect to the number of organizations, German is reported by 13,034; Norwegian, by 2,849; Swedish, by 2,177; Hebrew, by 946; French, by 889; Spanish, by 732; Polish, by 570; and Indian (American), by 524. In respect to the membership of organizations using the various languages, German continues to lead with 3,601,943, but the second place is held by French, with 1,160,420, the third place by Italian, with 938,994, and the fourth place by Polish, with 867,549. Other leading languages, with membership of the organizations using them, are Spanish, with 379,953, Norwegian, with 357,865, Swedish, with 266,603, Bohemian, with 201,791, Greek, with 114,495, and Slavic, with 113,852. The large figures shown for French are chiefly attributed to the large number of French Canadians in the country. In the case of the figures for all languages, it should be remembered that a greater or less proportion represents members who in their worship use English or a foreign language other than that specified.

Geographic distribution.—The 24,594 organizations which report the use of a foreign language, either alone or in connection with English, are distributed among the geographic divisions as follows:

North Atlantic division	5,177
South Atlantic division	340
North Central division	15,685
South Central division	1,445
Western division	1,947

The states reporting more than 100 organizations using a foreign language are as follows:

Minnesota	2,793	Indiana	555
Wisconsin	2,592	California	452
Pennsylvania	2,318	Massachusetts	444
Illinois	1,738	New Mexico	419
New York	1,409	New Jersey	382

South Dakota	960	Louisiana	170
Nebraska	950	Oregon	158
Missouri	709	Maryland	144
Texas	640	Maine	104
Kansas	608

Of the 41 individual languages tabulated on page 121, New York naturally reports the largest number, 29. Pennsylvania reports 28; Illinois, 26; and Ohio, 24; while 5 states, Massachusetts, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Washington, report 21 each. Three states—South Carolina, Georgia, and Kentucky—report only 3 languages, and 17 others less than 10 languages. Of these 17, only 2—Louisiana and New Mexico—are included among the states reporting more than one hundred organizations using a foreign language, and in each of these states some one language greatly preponderates—in Louisiana, French; and in New Mexico, Spanish.

Any comparison between the membership of church organizations reporting the use of foreign languages, and the foreign-born element of the population, however interesting, is impracticable on account of the widely different dates for which the information in the two cases is available, the figures for church membership being for 1906 and those for the foreign-born population for 1900. Such comparison is also rendered difficult by the facts that a portion of the foreign-born population is not identified with church life, and that in some sections, especially in the West, it is so scattered that organizations have not been formed, and consequently there is no report of membership.

The distribution throughout the country of organizations using a foreign language is shown in the next table.

[1] Oklahoma and Indian Territory combined.

The statement in the report for 1890 of the languages used in church services is so meager that comparison is scarcely possible. A tabular statement for the Lutheran bodies in that report shows that 8,364 organizations, with 1,189,119 members, reported services in English, German, German-English, Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, Icelandic, and Finnish, while the report for 1906 shows that in addition to these, the following languages were used: Esthonian, Indian (American), Lappish, Lettish, Lithuanian, Polish, Slovak, and Wendish. With the exception of the 1,178 organizations which in 1890 reported German-English, there is nothing to indicate to what extent English was used with the other languages. According to the returns for 1906, out of 12,703 organizations, with 2,112,494 members, 2,735 organizations, with 344,157 members, reported services in English only, while 9,808 organizations, with 1,754,355 members, reported the use of one or more foreign languages, and 160 organizations, with 13,982 members, made no report at all. If the 1,816 organizations which in 1890 reported English used English only, the percentage of those reporting English only has not materially changed, being 21.7 per cent of the total Lutheran organizations reporting as to language in 1890, and 21.8 per cent in 1906. In view of the very large immigration since 1890, this is not surprising, but the impossibility of knowing the number using English with the other languages in 1890 makes the comparison of little value.

In the case of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the report for 1890 shows services conducted in German, Spanish, Swedish, Norwegian, and Danish. The 1906 report shows in addition to these Armenian, Bohemian, Chinese, Finnish, French, Hebrew, Indian (American), Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, Slovak, and Welsh. In 1890 the number of organizations reporting a foreign language was 1,261, with a membership of 76,400, while in 1906 the number of organizations was 1,400, with a membership of 99,404. In the case of all other denominations, the statements as to languages used are too fragmentary to be useful.

A general survey of the situation in regard to the use of foreign languages in church services, as illustrated by the preceding tables, shows that, as already indicated, in local organizations originally made up of the non-English speaking immigrant element, the trend is toward the use, first of English in connection with the foreign language, and then to the exclusive use of English. The same thing appears in the statements of the history and work of the various bodies. In the early life of the Methodist Episcopal Church the feeling that English alone should be used was so strong that a distinct denomination, the Evangelical Association, grew out of the necessity of providing for those who knew no English. In the Roman Catholic Church one of the causes of disturbance in its early history was the effort to place English speaking priests in charge of the spiritual interests of non-English speaking communities. In the Lutheran bodies there has been a more general comprehension of the need for the immigrants on their arrival of the use of the mother tongue, but an equally clear recognition of the temporary character of such services.

WORK OF DENOMINATIONS IN DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN FIELDS.

The descriptive statements which accompany the statistics of denominations (pages 11 to 662, Part II) include, in addition to a review of the history, doctrine, and polity of each body, a sketch of its missionary, educational, and philanthropic work, both at home and abroad. The specific items called for under each head were as follows:

1. Home missionary work, including general evangelism and church erection: Agencies or societies employed; sections occupied; special features emphasized; total contributions for all departments during the calendar year 1906 and for such years prior thereto as information is available.

2. Foreign missionary work: Agencies or societies employed; countries occupied and languages used; number of mission stations, of churches and communicants, of missionaries and native helpers; value of mission property; amount of contributions during 1906 and for such previous years as information is available.

3. Educational work: Number and kind of schools, including parochial schools, supported in whole or in part by the denomination; number of teachers and pupils; value of property devoted to educational work; amount of contributions during the year 1906 and for such years prior thereto as information is available.

4. Institutional and general work: Hospitals, orphanages, homes for the aged, asylums, and the like (number, value of property, cost of maintenance, persons accommodated, etc.); Epworth leagues, Christian Endeavor societies, and the like (number of persons enrolled, amount contributed, for what purpose, etc.); brotherhoods and similar organizations (nature and extent of work); any other kind of work.

As indicated in the introduction, certain general difficulties were encountered, preventing that completeness and accuracy essential to a thoroughly scientific census presentation. Among these are the different forms of organization, the diverse methods of financial statements, and particularly the incomplete returns.

In most of the larger and more thoroughly organized bodies, as the Congregationalists, and the Methodist and Presbyterian bodies, and in some of the smaller denominations, the different phases of work are under the care of distinct societies. Thus, there is one society for home missions, emphasizing general evangelism; another for the erection of church buildings or parsonages; another for special evangelistic and educational work among negroes, Indians, and the foreign born population; another for Sunday school organization and the supplying of religious literature; another for the assistance of educational institutions or of students; another for foreign missionary work; besides a considerable number of minor societies for special objects. With the exception of the society for foreign work these cover largely the same territory and often have similar general aims, but are independent of each other. In some instances, as in the Protestant Episcopal Church, a single general society nominally covers the whole field, but practically a considerable amount of the work in each department is done by diocesan organizations. In the Roman Catholic Church there is no general organization for any one of these various departments, but the religious orders, and sometimes the dioceses, carry on the work on mutually independent lines under general ecclesiastical supervision. In the smaller bodies there is a smaller number of societies, and in a few there is no organization at all for the carrying on of general religious, benevolent, or foreign work, all initiative in these directions being taken by individual churches or by the regular ecclesiastical divisions.

As to methods of work and terms used there is almost as much diversity as in the forms of society organization. A mission in one of the Protestant bodies is an entirely different thing from a mission in the Roman Catholic Church, and in the Protestant bodies there is considerable variety as to the status of mission workers. It was also frequently difficult to determine the grade or character of the educational institutions.

Another serious difficulty arose from the very diverse methods of financial statement. The general purpose was to show the amount contributed by the churches of the United States for the various departments of missionary and benevolent work during the year under review. The reports that came in included in many cases not merely the contributions of the churches, but income from invested funds, fees for tuition, or for treatment in hospitals or asylums, etc. In other instances the figures sent in covered not the exact income during the year, but amounts expended or even appropriated for the respective departments of work. So far as possible these sources have been specially noted, but in many cases this was impracticable.

The greatest difficulty of all, however, arose from incomplete returns. In very few cases were all the questions answered, and frequently such figures as were given were incomplete. Schools were mentioned but no hint given as to their grade, no pupils were reported, and no value of property given; again the value of property was in some instances given, but with no indication of what the item covered. An effort was made to learn the number and membership of the young people's societies, but the returns were varied and incomplete. Sometimes correspondence elicited the necessary information, but in a number of instances it was evident that the authorities of the denominations themselves had no complete or accurate information as to the points in review.

With a view to a comprehensive presentation of the principal facts, tables have been prepared, the first relating to the domestic work, missionary, educational, and philanthropic; the second relating to the foreign mission work; and the third giving a summary of the contributions for these different departments.

In the preparation of these tables it was found necessary to limit the items presented to those which were common to many of the denominations, if not to all, and which admitted of classification; therefore some interesting and valuable information has been omitted from them. The conditions are set forth more fully in the general descriptive text which follows these tables, but it may be said here that the general presentation in the tables is reasonably accurate, and gives a fairly complete review of the work of the different bodies. It should be remembered also that the figures represent less rather than more than the entire amount of work done.

Of the 186 denominations, 75 made no report such as could be presented in tabular form. Of the remaining 111 denominations, 75 are represented in both the domestic and foreign work tables, 29 in the domestic work table, but not in the foreign, and 7 in the foreign work table, but not in the domestic. The domestic table, therefore, gives a survey of 104 denominations and the foreign table, of 82 denominations. The general summary of contributions includes reports for only 92 denominations, as several bodies reporting other items gave no figures of this nature.

Domestic work.—The table for domestic work which follows gives, for the 104 denominations listed, the amount contributed during the year 1906 for home missions, education, and philanthropic work; the number of persons employed in home missionary work and the number of churches aided; the number of colleges, academies, etc., with the number of their students; and the number of philanthropic institutions, including hospitals, asylums, orphanages, homes for the aged, etc., with the number of inmates and patients treated; the value of property and endowments for educational and philanthropic purposes.

Under home missions are combined all the evangelistic departments in the various denominations. The number of missionaries includes ministers, whether pastors supported by the home mission societies or general evangelists, and teachers in mission schools. Under churches aided are given those organizations supplied by home missionaries, or which have received aid in the conduct of their church work, or in the erection of church buildings. Under educational work are included only institutions of higher grade—colleges, academies, etc. In some denominations the amounts reported as contributed for education include those for the support of parochial schools, and in others the amounts reported as contributed for home missions include those for the support of mission schools. Wherever practicable, a note to this effect is appended. So far as possible the number of persons treated in the various hospitals, as well as those resident in the asylums and homes, have been given. An attempt was made to distinguish between value of property and amount of endowments, but there were so many instances in which this was difficult that these two items have been combined.

The denominations are arranged by families and separate denominations, the Protestant bodies being classed together.

It appears from this table that the total amount reported as contributed by the religious bodies in continental United States during the year 1906 for missionary, educational, and philanthropic work within this country was $38,675,919. Of this sum, $33,781,752, or 87.3 per cent, was given by the Protestant bodies; $4,419,563, or 11.4 per cent, by the Jewish congregations; and the balance, $474,604, or 1.2 per cent, largely by the Latter-day Saints. The figures for contributions reported by the Roman Catholic Church are so incomplete (only one organization reporting) that they are omitted. Several other bodies also made no report of contributions.

Among the Protestant bodies the Baptists reported contributions amounting to $13,125,325; the Methodist bodies, $6,186,433; the Presbyterian bodies, $4,631,391; the Protestant Episcopal Church, $2,665,133; the Lutheran bodies, $2,112,120; the Disciples or Christians, $1,735,456; and the Congregationalists, $1,034,154. The Northern Baptist Convention alone reported $11,732,896; the Methodist Episcopal Church, $4,277,723; and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, $3,062,771.

The total amount contributed for home missions, or general evangelism, was $12,762,271, of which the Methodist bodies reported $2,963,903; the Presbyterian bodies, $2,913,460; the Baptist bodies, $2,145,401; the Protestant Episcopal Church, $1,068,155; the Congregationalists, $969,789; and the Disciples or Christians, $641,456. For education the total amount reported is $17,665,445, apportioned in part as follows: Baptist bodies, $10,738,969; Methodist bodies, $2,019,428; Presbyterian bodies, $1,558,957; Disciples or Christians, $1,044,000; and Lutheran bodies, $826,672. In this connection it should be noted that the contributions for education by the Baptist bodies appear to include something over $6,000,000 for the University of Chicago. For philanthropic work the total amount contributed was $8,248,203, of which the Jewish congregations reported $4,304,172; the Methodist bodies, $1,203,102; the Protestant Episcopal Church, $1,154,836; and the Lutheran bodies, $655,393.

In the distinctively home mission department the total number of persons employed as missionaries or teachers was 20,044. The Presbyterian bodies lead with 3,868, and are followed by the Baptist bodies with 2,900; the Congregationalists, with 2,494; the Methodist bodies, with 2,147; the Protestant Episcopal Church, with 1,933; the Lutheran bodies, with 1,397; and the Disciples or Christians, with 1,206. The total number of churches aided was 22,591, of which the Baptist bodies reported 5,759; the Presbyterian bodies, 4,259; the Lutheran bodies, 2,840; the Methodist bodies, 2,378; the Congregationalists, 2,249; and the Protestant Episcopal Church, 2,077.

Under the head of education, 2,532 colleges, academies, etc., are reported, with 401,018 students. The Roman Catholic Church reported 1,011 institutions, with 121,343 students; the Methodist bodies, 372 institutions, with 99,048 students; the Presbyterian bodies, 308 institutions, with 47,592 students; and the Baptist bodies, 207 institutions, with 49,156 students.

Under the head of philanthropic institutions, 1,857 hospitals and asylums are reported, with 454,280 patients or inmates. The Roman Catholic Church reports 878 institutions, with 271,180 patients or inmates; the Salvationists, 203 institutions, with 9,587 inmates; the Methodist bodies, 144 institutions, with 38,536 inmates; the Protestant Episcopal Church, 136 institutions, with 47,236 inmates; the Lutheran bodies, 128 institutions, with 26,924 inmates; and the Jewish congregations, 121 institutions, with 38,116 inmates.

The total value of property and endowment reported was $297,510,918, of which $239,690,727 was for educational purposes, and $57,820,191 for philanthropic purposes. Of the total for educational purposes, the Methodist bodies reported $61,743,180; the Baptist bodies, $58,088,888; the Presbyterian bodies, $47,678,207; the Lutheran bodies, $17,869,661; and the Protestant Episcopal Church, $17,057,622. Of the total value of property and endowment for philanthropic purposes, the Protestant Episcopal Church reported $29,302,104; the Methodist bodies, $11,202,889; and the Lutheran bodies, $7,746,113.

It will be noticed that in a considerable number of cases no report was made, and in others only a partial report. The large amount reported for educational purposes by the Jewish congregations includes the Baron de Hirsch fund, which is not entirely educational in its purpose, but this seemed, on the whole, the best disposition that could be made of it.

Foreign work.—The table for foreign mission work presents for each denomination listed the amount contributed by the churches in the United States for the conduct of this work in its various departments; the total value of property; the number of countries and central stations occupied; the number of American missionaries and native helpers employed; the number of organized churches with their membership; the number of schools, together with the number of pupils; and the number of philanthropic institutions, together with the number of inmates. In view of the fact that the same country and sometimes the same city or town are often occupied by several denominations, no totals are given for the number of countries occupied or for the number of stations. The term "American missionaries," in accordance with the general usage in the United States and Great Britain, includes all those of either sex commissioned by the missionary societies. Of late the term has been held to include also the wives of missionaries. The term "native helpers" includes all those native to the country, whether preachers, teachers, colporters, or other workers of either sex, in the employ of a missionary society, but not the pastors of self-supporting native churches. The terms

"churches" and "members" are used in the same sense as in the report on religious conditions in the United States. The schools are, in the main, schools of higher grade—colleges, academies, normal schools, etc.—the primary schools connected with the missionary boards being to a considerable degree supported by the native churches themselves, and not included in the reports presented. The philanthropic institutions include hospitals, dispensaries, asylums, and orphanages. Under the head of inmates it is intended to include all patients who were treated during the year, as well as regular inmates; in some instances, however, the capacity is given rather than the total number of inmates. The property includes all buildings, whether for educational or philanthropic purposes, or for use as residences for missionaries. Sometimes it includes church buildings, but these commonly are not owned by the missionary society.

[1] Includes native helpers. [2] Not reported. [3] In aid of work carried on by foreign societies.

According to this table the total amount contributed in continental United States for the work of foreign missions in the year 1906 was $8,744,627. Of this amount, $8,655,981, or 99 per cent, was contributed by Protestant bodies, and the balance, $88,646, by the Latter-day Saints. The Roman Catholic Church in the United States (see page 607, Part II) does not contribute directly to foreign missions, although gifts are sent to the Society for the Propagation of the Faith and are then distributed in different foreign fields, but of this there is no definite record. In eight cases denominations which report missionaries and other items make no report of contributions, and in nine cases denominations contribute to foreign work through the societies of other bodies either in this country or in Europe.

The religious bodies which reported the largest contributions are as follows: Methodist bodies, $2,177,827; Presbyterian bodies, $1,941,704; Baptist bodies, $1,306,156; Congregationalists, $891,979; and the Protestant Episcopal Church, $549,070.

The total number of missionaries reported is 7,731, of whom 6,131 are reported by the Protestant bodies and 1,600 by the Latter-day Saints. The Presbyterian bodies reported 1,361; the Methodist bodies, 1,193; the Baptist bodies, 824; and the Congregationalists, 569. The number of native helpers employed is 35,388, of whom 31,303 are under the care of the Protestant bodies and 4,085 under the care of the Latter-day Saints. The Methodist bodies reported 10,370; Baptist bodies, 7,204; Congregationalists, 4,135; Presbyterian bodies, 3,918; and Lutheran bodies, 1,209. The Northern Baptist Convention and the Methodist bodies (see pages 51 and 436, Part II) have in Europe a large force, classed as native helpers, of a somewhat different type from those reported by other bodies.

The total number of churches reported is 8,323, with a membership of 922,567; and of these, 8,100 churches, with 860,516 members, belong to the Protestant bodies, and 223 churches, with 62,051 members, to the Latter-day Saints. The Baptist bodies reported 2,656 churches, with 275,687 members; the Methodist bodies, 1,801 churches, with 293,894 members; the Lutheran bodies, 826 churches, with 23,357 members; the Presbyterian bodies, 621 churches, with 96,771 members; and the Congregationalists, 580 churches, with 68,952 members.

The number of schools of various grades, but chiefly of the higher grades, reported by the different bodies is 8,708, and the number of pupils, 321,452. Of these, 8,699 schools with 319,968 pupils belong to the Protestant bodies, and 9 schools with 1,484 pupils to the Latter-day Saints. The Baptist bodies lead with 2,188 schools and 66,537 pupils. The Methodist bodies reported 2,151 schools, with 80,944 pupils; the Congregationalists, 1,468 schools, with 65,152 pupils; the Presbyterian bodies, 1,448 schools, with 51,360 pupils; and the Lutheran bodies, 684 schools, with 19,660 pupils.

The 549 philanthropic institutions reported, with their 1,492,647 inmates, including patients treated in hospitals and dispensaries, belong exclusively to the Protestant bodies. The Presbyterian bodies reported 143 institutions, with 587,585 inmates; the Congregationalists, 123 institutions, with 373,500 inmates; the Baptist bodies, 68 institutions, with 83,809 inmates; and the Methodist bodies, 28 institutions, with 123,022 inmates.

The value of property reported is $26,496,672, of which $26,196,084 belongs to the Protestant bodies and $300,588 to the Latter-day Saints. The Methodist bodies reported $11,491,664; the Presbyterian bodies, $5,921,571; the Baptist bodies, $1,689,650; the Congregationalists, $1,500,000; and the Protestant Episcopal Church, $1,271,548.

Summary of contributions.—The following summary of contributions as presented in the two preceding tables shows first, the total membership of the denominations reporting contributions; second, the total contributed for both domestic and foreign work, together with the amount under each head, and the per cent of the total; third, the total contributed specifically for home missions and foreign missions, with the amount under each head, and the per cent of the total; and fourth, the average amount contributed per member of the denominations reporting contributions.

[1] Heads of families only.

[2] Average per head of family.

From this table it appears that of the 111 denominations represented in the preceding tables as conducting evangelistic, educational, or philanthropic work at home or abroad, only 92 made a specific report of contributions. Many of the bodies making no report are small, with no general organization, and have only a few missionaries or schools, probably supported in a private way rather than by denominational collections. The Plymouth Brethren make no collections for their missionary work, and the domestic work of the Evangelistic associations and of some other bodies is on a similar basis. The only large body not reporting is the Roman Catholic Church, and in this case the failure to report is due, as already stated, to the peculiar organization for the conduct of benevolent work.

Comparing evangelistic work with educational and philanthropic work, it appears that $21,506,898, or 45.4 per cent of the total amount contributed, went to evangelistic work at home and abroad, and $25,913,648, or 54.6 per cent, to educational and philanthropic work in this country.

While home and foreign mission work includes educational and philanthropic work, it is in general of a different type from that reported under the head of education and of hospitals, asylums, etc. The latter is more of the nature of establishing permanent institutions, including both property and endowments, so that the contributions are to a considerable degree, though by no means entirely, of the nature of permanent investments. Illustrations are found in the large amount given to Chicago University and credited to the Northern Baptist Convention, and the Baron de Hirsch fund credited to the Jewish congregations. A considerable portion of the amounts credited to other bodies are evidently of the same general nature. On the other hand, the contributions for work of this type in both home and foreign missions are chiefly for running expenses.

If the amounts contributed for domestic work be compared with the total amounts reported by the different denominations, it appears that with the exception of the Jewish congregations, which reported no foreign work, and the Northern Baptist Convention, whose high percentage for domestic work, 93.5, was apparently due to exceptional conditions, the highest percentages are for bodies whose members are chiefly of German or Scandinavian extraction. The general percentage for all Lutheran bodies is 89.1, while for the Synodical Conference it is 97.8; the General Council, 89.3; the United Norwegian Church, 84.3; and the General Synod, 81.4. With these may also be classed the German Evangelical Synod of North America, 85.6 per cent, and the Evangelical bodies, 85.5 per cent. Aside from these, the highest percentages are those for the Protestant Episcopal Church, 82.9; the Latter-day Saints, 81.6; the Disciples of Christ, 79.5; the Presbyterian Church in the United States, 78.1; and the Methodist Episcopal Church, 76.7.

Comparison of home and foreign work.—Comparing the home mission work with the foreign mission work, like conditions appear. Thus the percentage for the Lutheran bodies in general is 71 per cent for the home work and 29 per cent for the foreign work. The Synodical Conference reported 90.8 per cent for the home work, the General Council 79 per cent, and the General Synod 69.7 per cent. For similar reasons the two Evangelical bodies directly interested in work among the foreign born population in this country show for the home work 81.9 per cent. High percentages reported by other bodies are: The Northern Baptist Convention, 69; the Protestant Episcopal Church, 66; and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 65.2. For the foreign work, the highest percentage for any single body shown in the table is for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 63.9 per cent. High percentages are also shown for the Seventh-day Adventists, 62.3; the Southern Baptist Convention, 61.6; the United Norwegian Lutheran Church in America, 57.1; the Presbyterian Church in the United States, 53.4; and the United Presbyterian Church of North America, 53.

The highest average of total contributions per member reported by any one denomination is $11.93 for the Northern Baptist Convention. Other high averages are $8.56 for the Seventh-day Adventists, $6.21 for the United Presbyterian Church, $4.56 for the Presbyterian Church in the United States, $3.62 for the Protestant Episcopal Church, and $3.60 for the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

The highest averages for distinctively mission work, both home and foreign, are $6.88 for the Seventh-day Adventists, $5.30 for the United Presbyterian Church of North America, $2.88 for the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, $2.66 for the Congregationalists, $2.50 for the Northern Baptist Convention, and $2.22 for the Evangelical bodies.

It is noticeable that most of the bodies which show a higher percentage of contributions for foreign missions than for home missions are such as, for one reason or another, chiefly because of the section in which they are located, are not affected by the immigrant element in this country; among them are the Adventists, the Southern Baptist Convention, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the United Presbyterian Church of North America, the Presbyterian Church in the United States, etc. The single prominent exception is the United Norwegian Lutheran Church in America, and this is probably explained by the intimate relations this body holds to the very successful foreign mission enterprise of the mother church in Norway.

As previously stated, these tables are far from complete. Only such sums are included as have been reported by the benevolent societies or ecclesiastical authorities in the various denominations, and the sums expended in the conduct of local work, often of a distinctively missionary character, do not appear. No attempt has been made to present the total benefactions, whether of the local churches or of individual members. Incomplete, however, as they are, they furnish a valuable and interesting exhibit. Perhaps the most important result of a study of these tables would be that the various religious bodies should come to realize the desirability of keeping a complete record of their benevolences so that a clear statement of them in every particular may be available. There is an increasing demand for definite financial statements in every department of activity, including the benevolences of the people, and particularly of the churches. That those in charge of these benevolences were not only willing but glad to make such statements is abundantly evident from the correspondence in connection with these tables. Not less evident, however, is the fact that there is as yet not enough uniformity or even harmony of presentation to enable one not personally acquainted with denominational methods to gain an accurate conception of the work the religious bodies are doing.

SUMMARY OF STATISTICS OF COLORED ORGANIZATIONS.

This summary includes statistics for all colored organizations reported, whether these organizations were connected with denominations consisting entirely of such organizations, or with denominations in which colored organizations represented only a part of the membership. The term "colored organization," as used in this connection, signifies an organization whose membership is composed wholly of negroes or those of negro descent. Including the National Baptist Convention (a branch of the regular Baptists), 17 bodies are reported which are wholly made up of colored organizations, as against 10 given in the report for 1890. Of those given in the report for 1890, two—the Congregational Methodist Church and the Evangelist Missionary Church—have disappeared, while the following 9 appear for the first time in the report for 1906: Colored Primitive Baptists in America; United American Freewill Baptists; Church of God and Saints of Christ; Churches of the Living God (3 bodies); Voluntary Missionary Society in America; Free Christian Zion Church of Christ; and Reformed Methodist Union Episcopal Church. The denominations composed in part of colored organizations are 26 in number, as against 18 in 1890. For these denominations the general and divisional officers were requested to indicate either the divisions (associations, conferences, etc.) that were made up wholly of colored organizations, or the scattered organizations that were composed wholly of colored members, and this method was supplemented, in the case of several denominations, by special correspondence, through which additional lists of colored organizations were secured. In this way an attempt was made to secure a substantially full report of colored organizations, although it is probable that some distinctively colored churches have been omitted. This effort was restricted, however, to churches comprising colored members only, and no attempt was made to ascertain the number of colored communicants belonging to local white churches.

GENERAL SUMMARY FOR 1906.

The general statistics for all the colored organizations at the close of the year 1906 are given in Tables 11, 12, and 14 (pages 538, 540, and 564). The total number of organizations reported for 1906, as shown by these tables, is 36,770. The total number of communicants or members, as reported by 36,563 organizations, is 3,685,097; of these, as shown by the returns for 34,648 organizations, 37.5 per cent are males and 62.5 per cent females.

According to the statistics, these organizations have 35,160 church edifices; a seating capacity for church edifices of 10,481,738, as reported by 33,091 organizations; church property valued at $56,636,159, against which there appears an indebtedness of $5,005,905; halls, etc., used for worship by 1,261 organizations; and parsonages valued at $3,727,884. The number of Sunday schools, as reported by 33,538 organizations, is 34,681, with 210,148 officers and teachers and 1,740,099 scholars.

Compared with the report for 1890, these figures show increases of 13,308 in the number of colored organizations, 1,011,120 in the number of communicants or members, 11,390 in the number of church edifices, and $30,009,711 in the value of church property.

COMPARISON OF ORGANIZATIONS, COMMUNICANTS OR MEMBERS, AND VALUE OF CHURCH PROPERTY, FOR 1906 AND 1890.

The next table shows for 1890 and 1906, by denominations in detail, the number of colored organizations, the number of communicants or members, and the value of church property.

Of the total number of organizations reported for 1906, as shown by this table, 31,393, with 3,207,307 communicants and church property valued at $44,673,049, belonged to the denominations made up wholly of colored organizations, while 5,377, with 477,790 communicants and church property valued at $11,963,110, were connected with denominations made up only in part of colored organizations.

Including denominations made up either wholly or in part of colored organizations in 1906, 6 Baptist bodies reported 19,891 organizations, with 2,354,789 communicants, and church property valued at $26,562,845; and 10 Methodist bodies reported 15,317 organizations, with 1,182,131 communicants and church property valued at $25,771,262. These 2 denominational families reported 35,208 organizations, or 95.8 per cent of the total number of colored organizations reported; 3,536,920 communicants, or 96 per cent of the total number of colored communicants reported; and church property valued at $52,334,107, or 92.4 per cent of the total value of church property reported by colored organizations.

[1] Negroes or persons of negro descent.
[2] The organizations shown for this denomination in 1890 were returned at that census as belonging to the Primitive Baptists.
[3] The colored organizations returned for this denomination in 1890 are included in the present report as belonging to the Colored Primitive Baptists in America.

Of the total increase in the number of organizations, 12,235, or 91.9 per cent, were in denominations consisting wholly of colored organizations; of the total increase in the number of communicants, 885,994, or 87.6 per cent; and of the total increase in the value of church property, $24,147,908, or 80.5 per cent. Including the denominations made up either wholly or in part of colored organizations, the Baptist bodies show an increase over 1890 of 6,602 organizations, or 49.7 per cent, and the Methodist bodies of 6,199, or 68 per cent, these 2 families reporting an increase of 12,801 organizations, or 96.2 per cent of the total. The increase in the number of communicants reported by the Baptist bodies is 951,230, or 67.8 per cent, which is 94.1 per cent of the total increase. For the Methodist bodies the figures show a slight decrease in the number of communicants, owing to the decrease in the number reported for the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, due, as already explained (see page 26), to the fact that the number given in the report for 1890 was too high. The increase in the value of church property shown by the Baptist bodies is $16,283,246, or 158.4 per cent, and by the Methodist bodies, $10,945,710, or 73.8 per cent, these 2 families showing an increase in the value of church property of $27,228,956, or 90.7 per cent of the total increase.

It is to be noted that the figures for the Baptists—Northern Convention, include only those colored organizations and members connected with white associations, while those organizations and members connected with exclusively colored associations have been transferred to the Baptists—National Convention (Colored). As a result, in the comparison with 1890 there appears a decrease in the figures for the Baptists—Northern Convention, though the total for the two conventions is not affected. It should be stated, also, that the decrease shown for the Disciples or Christians in the number of organizations and of communicants is probably due in part to incomplete returns for 1906.

STATISTICS OF DENOMINATIONS.

The following tables furnish detailed statistics for those denominations, for each of which at least 10,000 members of colored organizations were reported in 1906, the remaining 26 denominations being combined under one head as "all other bodies." Those denominations composed in part only of colored organizations are indicated by the word "part" connected with the title. The selected denominations are given in each table in the order of their rank according to the membership reported for 1906.

The body reporting the greatest number of organizations for 1906 is the Baptists—National Convention (Colored), with 18,534, or 50.4 per cent of the total number of colored organizations in the country, while the African Methodist Episcopal Church is next in order with 6,647, or 18.1 per cent of the entire number. The 3 leading colored Methodist bodies taken together, with the addition of the colored organizations belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church, report an aggregate of 14,982 colored Methodist organizations, or 40.7 per cent of the entire number of colored organizations. These 5 bodies, therefore, contain 33,516 colored organizations, or 91.2 per cent of the entire number reported.

The denomination showing the greatest absolute increase in the number of organizations from 1890 to 1906 is the Baptists—National Convention (Colored), with 6,001, the African Methodist Episcopal Church coming next, with 4,166. In the per cent of increase, however, the African Methodist Episcopal Church leads, with 167.9 per cent, while that of the Baptists—National Convention (Colored)—is 47.9 per cent. The decrease shown in the table in the number of colored organizations connected with the Baptists—Northern Convention—and with the Disciples or Christians is due to the reasons already stated. It will be seen from the table that while the rank of the different denominations in 1906 differs considerably from that in 1890, the relative position of the 5 principal bodies is the same for the two years, except that the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), which was second in 1890 in the number of colored organizations, changed places in 1906 with the African Methodist Episcopal Church, which was third in 1890.

[1] Negroes or persons of negro descent.
[2] Decrease.
[3] For 1906 includes 4 organizations, having 102 members, reported by the Primitive Baptists.
[4] Includes Disciples of Christ and Churches of Christ.
[5] Less than one-tenth of 1 per cent.

The body reporting the greatest number of communicants or members for 1906 is the Baptists—National Convention (Colored), with 2,261,607, or 61.4 per cent of the entire membership of colored organizations, while the denominations next in order are the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 494,777, or 13.4 per cent of the total; Methodist Episcopal Church (part), 308,551, or 8.4 per cent; African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 184,542, or 5 per cent; and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 172,996, or 4.7 per cent. The 3 leading colored Methodist bodies, with the addition of the colored organizations belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church, report a total of 1,160,866 members, or 31.5 per cent of the entire membership of colored organizations; and with the further addition of the Baptists—National Convention (Colored), a total of 3,422,473 members, or 92.9 per cent of the entire membership of colored organizations.

The denomination showing the greatest absolute increase in the number of communicants from 1890 to 1906 is the Baptists—National Convention (Colored), with 912,618; followed by the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), with 62,302, and the African Methodist Episcopal Church with 42,052. In the per cent of increase, however, the Free Baptists (part) lead with 3,913.3 per cent, the report for this body with respect to communicants in colored organizations in 1890 having apparently been incomplete. Next in order are the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), with 541.5 per cent, and the Roman Catholic Church (part), with 163.4 per cent.

In respect to the average number of members per organization, as shown by the table, the Roman Catholic Church (part), leads with 1,062, this being in keeping with the usual large average shown by this body. It is followed by the Baptists—Northern Convention (part), with 302; and the Baptists—National Convention (Colored), with 122.

[1] Negroes or persons of negro descent.
[2] Percentage not shown where base is less than 100.
[3] Includes 4 organizations having 102 members—45 males and 57 females—reported by the Primitive Baptists.
[4] Includes Disciples of Christ and Churches of Christ.

From the foregoing table it appears that 34,648 organizations, or 94.2 per cent of the total number, made report as to the sex of communicants; that the number of communicants thus reported was 3,527,660, or 95.7 per cent of the total, and that of this number, 1,324,-123, or 37.5 per cent, were males and 2,203,537, or 62.5 per cent, were females. The denominations showing the largest proportion of males are the Roman Catholic Church (part), 47.5 per cent; the Colored Cumberland Presbyterian Church, 46.5 per cent; and the United American Freewill Baptists (Colored), 43.9 per cent. The denominations showing the smallest proportion of males are the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), 35.2 per cent; the Colored Primitive Baptists in America, 35.7 per cent; and the Baptists—Northern Convention (part), 35.9 per cent.

Comparing the colored bodies with the corresponding white bodies, it appears that in almost every instance the colored bodies show a slightly lower percentage of males. Thus the per cent of males for the Methodist bodies as a whole is 38.5; of the African Methodist bodies, 37.3; of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 37.4; of the colored organizations in that body, 37.8; of the Baptists—Northern Convention, 36.5; of the colored organizations, 35.9; of the Protestant Episcopal Church, 35.5; of the colored organizations, 35.2; of the Roman Catholic Church, 49.3; of the colored organizations, 47.5. In 2 bodies reporting both white and colored organizations, the Congregationalists and Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the reverse is true, the percentage of males for the Congregationalists being 34.1, for the colored organizations, 38.6; of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 36.5; of the colored organizations, 37.4.

As shown by the next table, places of worship, either church edifices or halls, etc., were reported by all but 2.7 per cent of the total number of colored organizations. Of the 35,160 church edifices reported for 1906, the Baptists—National Convention (Colored) are credited with 17,913, or 50.9 per cent; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, with 18.6 per cent; the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), with 10.4 per cent; the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, with 6.6 per cent; and the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, with 6.1 per cent, the per cent distribution for the various bodies corresponding very closely to that for 1890. As compared with 1890, the table shows an increase in the number of church edifices of 11,390, or 47.9 per cent. The denominations showing the greatest absolute increase are the Baptists—National Convention (Colored), with 5,926, and the African Methodist Episcopal Church, with 2,414. Of the denominations reporting more than 100 church edifices in 1890, the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America shows the highest per cent of increase in the number of church edifices for colored organizations, 91.5 per cent. The total number of halls, etc., reported for 1906 was 1,261 as against 1,358 for 1890. Of these the Baptists—National Convention (Colored), are credited with 40.3 per cent, as compared with 48.8 per cent in 1890, and the African Methodist Episcopal Church, with 21.3 per cent, as compared with 2.3 per cent in 1890.

The next table shows that 33,091 colored organizations, or 95.9 per cent of the total number reporting church edifices, reported a seating capacity of 10,481,738. Of this number the Baptists—National Convention (Colored) reported 53.5 per cent; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 17.5 per cent; the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), 8.6 per cent; the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 7.2 per cent; and the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 6.6 per cent—these 5 bodies showing 93.4 per cent of the entire seating capacity reported by colored organizations.

The per cent distribution for the several denominations, as shown by the table, does not vary much from that for 1890. The increase in seating capacity from 1890 to 1906, according to the table, was 3,681,703, or 54.1 per cent. The denominations showing the greatest absolute increase are the Baptists—National Convention (Colored), 2,169,331, and the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 671,762. In per cent of increase, however, the Free Baptists (part), lead with 5,381.3 per cent, this large increase being due apparently, as previously stated, to incomplete returns in 1890. Next comes the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), with 259.3 per cent.

The average seating capacity per organization reporting, as shown by the table, is 317, ranging from 445 for the Baptists—Northern Convention (part), to 258 for the Disciples or Christians (part).

[1] Negroes or persons of negro descent.
[2] Percentage not shown where base is less than 100.
[3] For 1906 includes 4 organizations having church property valued at $2,300, reported by the Primitive Baptists.
[4] Includes Disciples of Christ and Churches of Christ.
[5] Less than one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Of the total number of colored organizations, 34,660, or 94.3 per cent, reported value of church property in 1906. Of the total value reported, $56,636,159, the Baptists—National Convention (Colored) reported 43.1 per cent; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 20 per cent; the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), 10.8 per cent; the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 8.5 per cent; and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 5.3 per cent, these 5 principal bodies holding 87.7 per cent of the entire value of church property reported in 1906 by colored organizations, as compared with 88.4 per cent in 1890. If the Baptists—Northern Convention (part), and the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), are added to these 5 bodies, the 7 bodies represent 93.6 per cent of the value of church property reported in 1906 as compared with 93.2 per cent for the same bodies in 1890. The increase in value from 1890 to 1906, as shown by the table, is $30,009,711, or 112.7 per cent. In absolute increase, the Baptists—National Convention (Colored) rank first; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, second; the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), third; the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, fourth; the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), fifth; and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, sixth. In per cent of increase, however, the Free Baptists (part) come first, with the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), second. In the average value of church property per organization reporting, as shown by the table, the Roman Catholic Church ranks first, with $21,203; and is followed by the Baptists—Northern Convention (part), with $16,096; and the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), with $11,153. The denomination showing the lowest average value is the United American Freewill Baptists (Colored), with $525, and the one showing the next lowest average, the Colored Primitive Baptists in America, with $584.

[1] Negroes or persons of negro descent.
[2] Percentage not shown where base is less than 100.
[3] Includes 4 organizations, having no debt on church property, reported by the Primitive Baptists.
[4] Includes Disciples of Christ and Churches of Christ.

Of the 34,660 colored organizations reporting value of church property, 9,003, or 26 per cent, reported debt on church property. In the case of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 40.9 per cent of the organizations reporting property also report debt; and of the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), 38.3 per cent. In the case of the Baptists—Northern Convention (part), for which, however, only 97 organizations reported the value of church property, practically 4 out of 7 report debt. The denomination showing the lowest percentage is the Colored Primitive Baptists in America, only 6.6 per cent of the organizations which reported value of church property also reporting debt.

The total amount of debt reported, as shown by the table, is $5,005,905, or 8.8 per cent of the value of church property reported. The denominations showing the highest percentage of debt as compared with the value of property are the Baptists—Northern Convention (part), 22.9, and the Roman Catholic Church, 11.1; while the denomination showing the lowest percentage is the Colored Primitive Baptists in America, 2.3 per cent. The average for each organization reporting debt is $556. The denominations showing the highest average per organization are the Roman Catholic Church, $9,456; the Baptists—Northern Convention (part), $6,491; and the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), $4,045. The denominations showing the lowest are the United American Freewill Baptists (Colored), $158, and the Colored Primitive Baptists in America, $205. By comparison with the previous table it will be seen that the 5 bodies named rank the same in respect to average debt as in respect to average value of church property reported.

[1] Negroes or persons of negro descent.
[2] Percentage not shown where base is less than 100.
[3] Includes 4 organizations having no parsonages, reported by the Primitive Baptists.
[4] Includes Disciples of Christ and Churches of Christ.

The table shows that of the 36,770 colored organizations, 4,779, or 13 per cent, reported parsonages. The denomination showing the highest proportion of parsonages as compared with church organizations is the Roman Catholic Church (part). Of the 36 colored organizations reported by this body, 22, or nearly two-thirds, owned parsonages. Of the total number of colored organizations reported by the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), 1,206, or 32.2 per cent, reported parsonages. For the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), the percentage is 29.3; for the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 26.8; and for the Congregationalists (part), 23.1. The denominations showing the lowest percentages are the United American Freewill Baptists (Colored), and the Disciples or Christians, with 2.4 each. The total value of parsonages reported, as shown by the table, is $3,727,884. Of this amount, the African Methodist Episcopal Church reported $1,255,246, or a little more than one-third, while the next in order are the Methodist Episcopal Church (part); Baptists—National Convention (Colored); African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church; and Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, these 5 bodies together reporting $3,238,439, or 86.9 per cent of the total value of parsonages reported. The average value for each organization reporting is $780. The denominations showing the highest average per organization reporting are the Roman Catholic Church (part), $4,973; the Protestant Episcopal Church (part), $2,844; Baptists—Northern Convention (part), $2,088; and Congregationalists (part), $1,281. The denominations showing the lowest are the United American Freewill Baptists (Colored), $246; the Colored Primitive Baptists in America, $481; and the Disciples or Christians (part), $488.

[2] Percentage not shown where base is less than 100.
[3] Includes 4 organizations making no returns for Sunday schools, reported by the Primitive Baptists.
[4] Includes Disciples of Christ and Churches of Christ.

The table shows that of the total colored organizations, 33,538, or 91.2 per cent, reported Sunday schools. The denominations showing the highest percentages of Sunday schools, as compared with the total number of organizations, are the Colored Cumberland Presbyterian Church, with 98 per cent, and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, with 97.1 per cent. The denominations showing the lowest percentages, as compared with the total number of organizations, are the Colored Primitive Baptists in America, with 20.7 per cent, and the United American Freewill Baptists (Colored), with 39.8 per cent, the low percentage shown for these 2 bodies probably being due in part to incomplete returns.

The total number of Sunday schools reported is 34,681. Of these, the Baptists—National Convention (Colored) reported 51.6 per cent, a little more than one-half; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 18.1 per cent; the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), 10.8 per cent; the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 6.7 per cent; and the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 6 per cent, these 5 bodies reporting 32,360 Sunday schools, or 93.3 per cent of the total number reported by colored organizations.

The total number of Sunday school officers and teachers reported was 210,148. Of these the Baptists—National Convention (Colored) reported nearly one-half; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 20 per cent; the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), 12.4 per cent; the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 7.7 per cent; and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 5.9 per cent, these 5 bodies reporting 196,674 Sunday school officers and teachers, or 93.6 per cent of the entire number reported by colored organizations.

The total number of Sunday school scholars reported by colored organizations is 1,740,099. Of these, the Baptists—National Convention (Colored) reported 924,665, or a little more than one-half; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, 16.8 per cent; the Methodist Episcopal Church (part), 11.8 per cent; the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 6.2 per cent; and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, 5.3 per cent, these 5 bodies reporting 1,622,313 Sunday school scholars, or 93.2 per cent of the entire number reported by colored organizations.

DISTRIBUTION OF COMMUNICANTS OR MEMBERS BY STATES AND TERRITORIES.

The statistics of colored organizations for 1906, for all denominations, are given by states and territories in Table 12 (page 540). The following table shows this distribution for communicants or members alone for 1890 and 1906, and the relative position of each state at the two periods:

[1] Negroes or persons of negro descent.
[2] Idaho, Nevada, North Dakota, and Vermont had no colored organizations in 1906 or 1890.
[3] Oklahoma and Indian Territory combined.

From the number of communicants given in this table, it appears that 1 state reports a membership of over 500,000; 4 report a membership of from 300,000 to 400,000; and 7, a membership of from 100,000 to 300,000. These 12 states report a total colored membership in 1906 of 3,202,853, or 86.9 per cent of the entire membership of colored organizations. The same states reported a membership in 1890 of 2,398,865, or 89.7 per cent of the entire membership of colored organizations at that time. The relative position of the different states varied somewhat at the two censuses. Georgia was the leading state at each census, while 5 others of the 12 states—Arkansas, Florida, Kentucky, Texas, and Virginia—held the same relative position in 1906 as in 1890. On the other hand, South Carolina, which was second in 1890, changed places in 1906 with Alabama, which was third in 1890, while North Carolina changed places with Mississippi, and Louisiana with Tennessee.

In addition to the 12 states already named, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia, in the South Atlantic division, and Oklahoma, in the South Central division, reported a comparatively large colored membership. These 2 geographic divisions, the South Atlantic and South Central (see Table 12), reported in 1906 a total membership for colored organizations of 3,375,546, and in 1890 the same states reported a corresponding membership of 2,495,031, or somewhat more than nine-tenths—91.6 and 93.3 per cent, respectively—of the total colored membership reported for continental United States at each census.

Outside of the South Atlantic and South Central divisions, the states reporting in 1906 the largest membership for colored organizations are, Pennsylvania, 60,161; Missouri, 50,074; Ohio, 33,667; Illinois, 32,058; and New York, 30,482. Ohio held the same relative position in 1906 as in 1890, while Pennsylvania changed places with Missouri, and Illinois with New York. Of all the states and territories, Oklahoma shows the highest percentage of increase in members of colored organizations, namely, 3,208.5 per cent. Five states—North Carolina, Michigan, Oregon, Wyoming, and Maine—report a smaller number of members in 1906 than in 1890. The decrease shown for North Carolina is due largely to the decrease in the number of members reported for the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, which is especially strong in North Carolina. The states reporting no members of colored organizations either in 1890 or 1906 are Idaho, Nevada, North Dakota, and Vermont.

COLORED MINISTERS.

The number of ordained colored ministers connected with denominations made up wholly of colored organizations, as reported for 1890 and 1906, is given in detail by denominations in Table 8 (page 514). The table following shows for each of these denominations the number of ministers and the number of organizations reported in 1906.

[1] Negroes or persons of negro descent.

The table shows that for the denominations made up wholly of colored organizations, the total number of ministers reported for 1906 was 31,624, and the total number of organizations 31,393. Of the total number of ministers, 17,117, or 54.1 per cent, were connected with the Baptists—National Convention (Colored); 6,200, or 19.6 per cent, with the African Methodist Episcopal Church; 3,082, or 9.7 per cent, with the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church; 2,671, or 8.4 per cent, with the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church; and 1,480, or 4.7 per cent, with the Colored Primitive Baptists in America, these 5 bodies having 30,550 ministers, or 96.6 per cent of the entire number of ordained ministers reported for denominations composed wholly of colored organizations. For 3 of these bodies, namely, United American Freewill Baptists (Colored), the Church of God and Saints of Christ (Colored), and the African Methodist Episcopal Church, the number of ministers is estimated because complete information was not obtainable. The number of colored ministers connected with denominations partly made up of colored organizations is not known. Estimating it on the basis of the number of ministers per organization for each of these denominations as a whole, the number is approximately 3,600. If this number be added to the number connected with denominations composed wholly of colored organizations, an estimated total is obtained of 35,224 ministers of colored organizations in continental United States, as compared with 36,770 colored organizations belonging to the denominations in question.

TABLE 4.—POPULATION IN 1900 AND COMMUNICANTS OR MEMBERS FOR SELECTED DENOMINATIONS, FOR EACH STATE AND TERRITORY, BY COUNTIES: 1906.

[The term "County location unknown" is used in this table to cover those cases where the report of a church organization failed to specify the county in which it was situated, due either to a direct omission to so report or to the fact that the return of a circuit or charge, or the like, sometimes comprised two or more churches located in different counties for which no separate report was made.]
